The next step in the Humber affair will be the trial of the conductor and ouglaser of the freight train. Barber has been sent to jail to await his trial at the actives, ou the 34th of this month, and Jeffrey has been admitted to bail until the same date. Their indicates the patricular of the patricu jury, which, to say the least of it, was a rambling affair and distributed the blame of sausing the accident over so many officials and employes of the railway company that it may now be difficult to fix it upon the two who have been placed under arrest. If the system of running trains is as bad as the jury have made it out to be, it is surely a little unfair that the two unfortunate employes who had charge of the freight train should be made to bear the brunt of the blame.

HE WAS NO THIEF.

"Gentlemen," said an Arkansaw Colonel, as he stood under the limb of a tree from which depended a rope, "I must protest my innocence. I did not steal the mule. I am above petty theft. I know that you all have the interest of the community at heart, and I do not blame you; but there are times when we are all liable to be too rash. If I had stolen the mule, my guilt would oppress me until I would beg to be put out of the world in the most summary way."

"Did you trade for him ?" "I did not." Then who stole him? Let down the rope, boys."
"Gentlemen, I hope you will give me a chance to explain. The mule in question was the property of one of our distinguished fellow-citizens, Major Ruglesberry. Some time ago the Major and I exchanged a few words of an uncomplimentary nature. I intimated that the Major's blood would be highly satisfac-tory to me, and the Major said that my gore would please him mightily. Well we separated thoroughly agreeing with each other. The next day the Major and I met. I got what is vulgarly called the drop on him, and relieved him of the top of his head. He was riding amule at the time, and when he fell off I saw that he had no longer any practical use for the animal so I took charge of him. Now, if I had dismounted in the way he did, I should have interposed no objection to the Major taking my herse."

"I hope, sir, that you will excuse us," replied the leader of the mob. "We thought that you stole the mule. Your explanation is most satisfactory, and pe you'll excuse us. Let us all take a

In the treatment of dyspepsia we have in Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya a remedy worthy the attention of all those suffering from this protean disease. We frequently meet with cases in which all ordinary methods of treatment are of no avail the stomach and bowels continue disorder ed, the liver torpid, tongue heavily coated, disagreeable tasts in the mouth, acidity, water brash, flatulence, headaches, drowsiness after eating, irratibility and reatlessness, with a depression of spirits. Here the food is not digested and assimifated, the blood becomes impoverished and constitutional vigor speedily impaired. The great number of these cases in which the Elixir has proved successful has demonstrated its efficacy in this distressing affection.
