A MARVELOUS STORY
TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "I feel both pleasure and duty for me to state to you the benefits I have derived from the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
I feel in his case, I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago.

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefits I have derived from the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
Six months ago I was completely covered with scrofulous humors and scrofulous sores. The humor ceased an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked as it caused the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved.

Yours gratefully,
W. M. PHILLIPS.

A horrifying scene was witnessed last week in a barn on the west side, Chicago, in which the life of a young woman, a lion and a diminutive Shetland pony, Charles, the lion tamer, when the winter set in, stored his animals in the barn used in the opening of the circus season in the spring. His menagerie consisted of a fine horse, a Shetland pony valued at $1,000, and two African lions of huge proportions. One morning he entered the barn, accompanied by several children, a lady and Mr. Harris, and prepared to enter the cage. Before doing so, however, he made the children go out of the barn. When all was ready he opened the cage and quickly entered, having arranged with Harris to close the door, but this important part of the programme was forgotten by Harris, and when the tamer raised his whip, and commanded one of the lions to leap over the head dashed under Charles's legs, leaped to the floor of the barn and with a single bound was outside of the pony, which was crushed beneath the lion's weight. Sinking his teeth into the neck of the pony, he tore the animal to pieces. The cries of the pony were frightful to witness. The lady and Mr. Harris were frightened almost beyond the power to save themselves. They got out as quickly as possible, Harris and Charles got out of the barn and securing some large sponges saturated them with chloroform, tied them to long sticks and applied them to the nostrils of the lion while he was devouring his victim. He was soon stupefied and they summoned assistance and succeeded in repeating the operation. The escape of the lady and Harris was almost marvellous, and it is attributable possibly to the presence of the pony, which the lion must have regarded as its legitimate prey.
