THE PECK BUSINESS.

The motion of Mr. Jno. Fell for papers re Peck appears to have raised a large amount of bile in the breasts of Reform editors. This is particularly notices ble on the part of the editor of the Fenelon Falls hinted at that powerful journal has continually squeaked at him about something till all the country round Jno. Fell, and the story of his miss-doings has reached every nock and corner from Kinmount to Cameron. No sconer did he take his seat it appears than he "began to show his enmity" towards Mr. Peck, and it is further asserted that "it would have come with a much better grace from some one else" when beginning the so-called persecution.

We must certainly express our sorrow that Mr. Fell should have so thoughtlessly gone against the views

When the Gazatte gets through abusing Mr. Fell, perhaps it will be good enough to explain this to as,

OTHER places are following Toron to's example in the matter of grocers' liquor licenses. It is probable that before long there will be a complete separation in Ontario of groceries from liquors. The next step the temperance people should take should be in the direction of suppressing the unlicensed groggeries.

Tun British ferees under General Graham attacked the rebels at Teb on Friday, and after a sharp fight sarried the works, losing 24 men killed and 142 wounded, the rebele leaving 1,100 dead on the field. On Saturday an advance was made on Tokar, which was occupied after a few shots had been exchanged.

SHERIFF BURE, of Cobourg, has unfortunately been obliged to resign through ill-health, and Mr. Isane Usear Prostor, of Brighton, has been appointed to the shrievalty of Northumberland and Durham in his stead. Mr. Burk has enjoyed his incumbency but a short time, having been appointed to his office only last

Once more has the eloquent voice of Mr. McIntyre been raised in the House. In speaking of the Ontario license law he said he believed in the dostrine that to the victor belongs the spoils. He further said the Government would be blaimed if they apthey could find one of their own political friends who sould fill it. Liverat Mr. McIntyrel

As will be seen by advt. elsewhere the election of deputy-reeve of Fenelon takes place on Monday next. Two candidates were nominated, Mr. Thomas Smithson, the former deputy-reeve, and Mr. Knight, the gentleman who succeeded in voiding his election. Mr. Smithson we hope will be elected as he has a prior claim to the seat and should have been allowed to occupy it in peace.

all licenses taken out under the Donion license law (McCarty act) will, we are told on good authority, be disallowed by Sir John Macdonald. It is claimed that one of the functions of the federal government is to protest latures. It was on somewhat similar ground that he disallowed the rivers and streams bill.

One of the most interesting features of the collision which is likely to ocour between the Provincial and Dominion License Act is, that while the former specifically provides that no license commissioner or inspector of makes the warden of the county one of the license commissioners by virtue away. On Thursday of last week the House was enlivened by a variation in the proceedings. Immediately after prayers, Mr. Blake on a point of privilege moved a lengthy resolution, the pith of which was as indictment of Sir Charles Tupper for violation of "Independence of Parliament Act," in acting as high commissioner in orgament was that the minister of railways, who is member for Cumberland, having accepted an office of emoloment under the Government was disqualified to sit, speak, or vote in Parliament, the Government having paid his expenses made the posttion one of emolument in reality, it not in name. In violent language Mr. Blake accused Sir Chas. with degrading Parliament by sitting, speaking and moving resolutions in the House, where he had no more right than the pages who ran about the floor, and moved that the Speaker Sir Richard Cartwright.

If the Government were precluded from sending any of their members on any mission except at his own expense their means of usefulness would be greatly lessened, and such an interpretation sould not have been con-templated when the Act was passed. But it was gratifying to Mr. Blake to see Sir Charles' seat vacant, even for the few hours the subject was under debate. The leader of the Opposition fears and in consequent bates Sir Charles who has so often administered to him severe punish-ment. An amendment referring the whole matter to the committee on privileges and elections was moved by Sir John and carried by a vote of 112 to 57. On the same day Sir Charles was served with a writ for $5,200 for sitting and voting in the House in contravention of the Act. (Penalty of $200 per day.) When they found the ground so neatly taken from under their feet their chagrin was great and no further obstruction was

Sir Richard Cartright replied. Now no one doubts Sir Richards great ability and his competence to deal with teriff, after five years of trial, has thrown to the winds all his theories and predictions regarding it and proved Sir Leonard right. He had nothing to stand on, but indulged in exaggerating the cloud of dullness passing over the country and on still further prediction of evil to come. What his speech lacked in depth was made up in length, volubility and vehement delivery. About midnight Mr. White, of Cardwell, moved the adjournment of the debate.

The Rev. Mr. Gillies, of Lorneville, officiated. Mr. McGilvery settled in the north part of Eldon in the year 1836, expecting that the Trent Valley canal was to be built at that time. After being there for 48 years he did not see the canal, but in a short time he may have the pleasure of looking down and seeing a steamboat load of young people go-ing through the township of Eldon on an excursion to Lindeay or to Orillia and Barrie and return to Balsover at night all well rationed with their day's
