ing, 26th ult., our villagers were aroused from their peaceful slumbers by the prolonged shouts of "fire," and in less time that it takes to record it was discovered that the agricultural buildings of Mr. Isaiah Best were being devoured by the firy element. It spread from this point west to a stable belonging to Mr. Edward Courtney and south to the dwelling house and stable of Mr. George Maddis, which it burned to the ground in a very short space of time. It was with difficulty that the residences of Mr. Isaial. Best and Mrs. Workman were saved, as the wind blew the burning material on top of and around those buildings, but with the willing aid of the villagers the fire was quenched. Mr. Isaiah Best's loss is estimated at Mr. Isaiah Best's loss is estimated at about $8,000 or $10,000; besides the loss to himself connected with his foundry there were various articles there for repsire belonging to farmers of the surrounding country. He had on hand a number of implements ready for use, a large stock of lumber and plankings, a huge supply of wood, etc., etc. Mr. Courtney's loss was only his stable and about five tons of hay, as all the other contents were removed. Mr. Maddis and his son were unfortunately absent at the time, and none were in the house only the women and a lad of about twelve years, so that before they were rightly aware of it the house had caught and everything was lost with the exception of a verv tew trifling articles and what clothes they managed to put on, which were not the best.
