As Soan Bohind the Scenes. The public has formed a wrong indensiemanly soons shifter, People think of her as a living leeberg. Nothing could be further from the trate. The is for all the world like a big school of a chock full of animal spirits and everflowing with joility. Why, I have seen her bound into the wings, and in the exuberance of her froliesome dispohim carry her. Icobergs don't do that she is just the sweetest, nicest and best ghd you ever met, and not a bit study op when you come to know her. When Louis dames was playing Romeo to her dullof in this theater two or three cars ago, he took her nose between his teeth when she stooped over to take the poison off his lips, and held her so eaw what he was doing, and she was in an agony of fear lost the audience should see it foo. Just look at that devil, she cried, coming over to where I was standing. he is biting Mary's nose right there on the stage. Oh, I wish I could get at him! What a dre ous there was when the curtain rung down. Mary chased James all over the stage with a piece of board, and the company looked on and split their sides laughing at the sight. Gen. Sherman always liked Mary Anderson, but since the papers blasted him for kissing the chorus girls he has never gone behind the seenes. When Bob Downing joined her company he says to her, New, Mary, when I play Romoo to your Juliet I am going to make love to you with as much earnestness as though I were dead mashed on you. There will be no foolishness about my lovemaking. I will kiss you just as a real-sure-enough lover would do. I want that understood, 'All right, Bob,' sho roplied; that's just what I want you to da. Oh, you, Mary Anderson is an inchery in your mind she is."

Fair Woman's Smile, This description of a woman's smile, says the New York Commercial Adver-

Meer, is said to be taken from a Haw-aisa romance, but there is a certain something about it calculated to create several doubts in the mind of the reader: "Crouched at the foot of the old board fence that hid the humble dwellboard fence that hid the humble dwelling from the sharp scrutiny of passing vehicles and men. She was fat and large of limb, and her round brown cheeks glowed with the rich warmth of the chestnut. Her long lashed eyelide dropped over her lustrous eyes, and the thick tresses of her black hair shaded her neck and bosom. Suddenly some passing object arrested her attentions of the Stirling figs. shaded her neck and bosom. Suddenly some passing object arrested her attention, and the dark pupils of her eyes expanded in amused surprise. Her rich red lips parted, and there flashed upon the landscape two rows of beautiful white teeth. Slowly her mouth opened wider and wider. Desper grew the dimples on her bronzed cheeks. Brighter danced the sunbeams in her eyes, until a stray ray, darting through the foliage of an overhanging bough, illuminated the deep cavern of her mouth, bringing into view the back of her head. bringing into view the back of her head. Then, seeing the gaze intently upon her she shut her jaw, and darkness fell upon the scene."

The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. Aven's CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

"In 1857 Ltook a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayen's Cherry Program, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the Program as permanent cure was effected.
