DALRYMPLE.

HEARTS MURDER.—A horrible tragedy took place near Fenton's tavern, on the Monk road, twelve miles east of Orlilla, on the morning of Friday last. There has been a scandalous quarrel for the past month or two caused by the alleged intimate relations existing between one Jesse Higgins and the wife of Edward Steel.

The murdered man, was a widower with one grown up son, and was about 65 years old. He had about six weeks ago induced Story's wife to go and live with him, and kept her for a week. Story after some difficulty induced his wife to return. Higgins habitually entered Story's premises whenever he liked. Mrs. Storey seems to have tired of Higgins, and on Friday morning told her husband that she expected a visit from Higgins, whom she would refuse to see for the future, and requested Story to answer his call and dismiss him. Story informed one of his children, of whom he has four, to call on Higgins called, her parents were from home, and then he himself. Higgins came along, presently and was informed that he had been dismissed, and demanded to see the child's mother. Story then entered and ordered him to leave the premises. Higgins satly refused, boldly stating his intentions to take Story's wife with him. Story stepped Higgins across the face and ordered him away again and was again refused until Mrs. Story should go too.

Higgins was a small man and Story was a big, burly, powerful fellow, and on this second refusal to quit his premises he knocked Higgins down and dragged him out of doors. Here he kicked the unfortunate man to death, breaking every rib loose from the backbone, it is said. Higgins revived a little, and started about nine o'clock in the morning to crawl to his own home, which was only a short distance off, and had scarcely arrived at home in the evening when discovered by his son. Two doctors were brought from Orlilla, but it availed nothing.
