The prince of Wales, it is said, has recently taken to American whisky, and is now addressed as 'Your Ryness.'

It is said that hens can be trained to eat potato bugs; but in that case can anybody be trained to eat eggs or hens? 'In the light of this menagerie!' cried the spirit. Then the other beasts wanted to put him out.

The 'four of habit,' said the gambler, softly, as he dealt himself all the aces in the pack.

The difference between a dog and a boy consists in the fact that when the dog finds a scent he doesn't spend it for candy.

The widow of Balzac, nee Countess Rosowska, has sold her Paris mansion to Baroness de Rothschild, widow of Baron Solomon-James, for 500,000 francs.

'How to become the Owner of Your Farm' is the name of a pamphlet now circulating in Ireland. The agitators think that the easiest way is to shoot the landlord.

Cleveland editors are developing a genius for nicknaming. Thus the Penny Press man speaks of the Leader as the Follower, while Mr. Cowley retorts on his small adversary by dubbing it the Penny Puss.

A California paper says that wild geese swarm like bees 'around Washoe Lake, Nev. The smoke-stack of a passenger engine the other evening knocked three fat old ganders out of a flock that was flying across the track.

The trade in sheep pelts in Los Angeles county, California, is very lively of late, the prices varying all the way from 10 cents to $1.25, according to the amount of the wool and the grade of the defatted sheep, 60 cents being a fair average.

A rattlesnake confined in a cage for eleven months shed its skin four times, ate sixty rats, and, although it had access to a tank of water, an apparatus prepared for the purpose proved it had never drunk a drop.

The Springfield Union thinks that instead of fitting out expeditions to discover the North Pole, and to suffer hardships in Arctic seas, it would seem more wise and sensible to find out something we do not know about our own country.

Senator Thurman appears to be the most jovial and contented of the political statesmen. He laughed a reporter out of his room in New York the other day, saying that he really knew more about politics than his friend, John Smith.

A distinguished Spanish physician, Dr. Oliva, after a long term of close observation, gives it as his opinion that powdered cobwebs when taken in two-grain doses, will cure the most obstinate cases of malarial fever. To make cobweb powder, clean the cobwebs, dry them in the sun, and pound them in a mortar. One gets this ash-brown powder, insoluble in water, and hardly soluble in alcohol.

Mrs. Tomkyns de Tomkyns—'This lady was evidently intended by nature for a Chinese, Sir Charles? I wonder who she can be?' 'Sir Charles—'She happens to be my sister. May I ask you why you think nature intended her for a Chinese?' Mrs. de Tomkyns (equal to the emergency)—'She struck me as having such exquisitely small feet!'

One of the Zuni Indian Chiefs from New Mexico, in an address in Boston, showed an amazing appreciation of the merits of his hosts. 'I am happy to look upon the American people,' he said, 'for they smile on me, which shows the goodness of their hearts. We regard the Americans as great gods—as we do the sun. They are like our animal gods. However wonderful and precious they are, they show by their kind looks that they have room for us in their hearts.'

A letter mailed in 1853 was recently found behind a shelf in a country post-office, and forwarded to its destination. It was addressed to a young lady, and contained a marriage proposal. When the lady read it she looked pleased, and exclaimed, 'Law me! I didn't expect to hear from John so soon. But what a wonderful thing is the fast-mail service!'

'Then you are paying attention to old Grider's daughter, are you, my son?' 'Yes, mother; I have waited upon Miss Grider somewhat. She's a nice sort of girl. Father's got money.' 'Precious little good that'll do you, my son. He's the richest man in these parts.' 'But you got no money, he can't live forever, and—' 'Don't you be too sure. I've known old Grider for forty years, and he hasn't died yet.' 'This is the common way to thrive.'

'Johnny' chided his mother, 'How can you be so cruel to that poor girl? How would you like to have a great elephant come along and stamp on you the way you did that poor little girl?' 'I think, mamma,' replied Johnny, 'that I wouldn't give the elephant the chance. I'd keep out of his way, and all I ask of the flea is to keep out of my ear.'

Spelling-Maid. 'I suppose Vanderbilt has a right to do as he pleases with his stock,' said a gentleman who had lately spent a week or two in New York, and who takes an interest in fast horses, to a Herald representative yesterday, 'but the American public generally will be sorry to learn of the manner in which he is managing that great favorite, Mand S. I saw him driving her a few days ago, and it was clearly evident that he was spelling her. He drives her like a Jehu, no matter what the condition of the roads may be, and pulls and hauls the mare about much as a horse-driver might be expected to do with a less royal steed. I was sorry to see it. I was told that he was not only spelling her gait, but spelling her temper as well; and you know what an excellent reputation Mand used to have on account of her kind disposition. I would rather see Vanderbilt stick to his railroad stocks.'—Cleveland Herald.

Goats and Dogs. In some parts of the West goats are placed in sheep pens to drive away wolves, a service for which their superior butting powers peculiarly fit them. The experiment has been tried in Hunterdon and Somerset Counties, N. J., with complete success, as a protection for sheep against dogs. Two goats, it is said, can drive away a dozen dogs, and are about all that is necessary to keep a moderate-sized flock. As soon as a dog enters the field he signs the goats go to him, and send him rolling over and over in short order. A few doses of this heroic treatment prove quite enough for his dogship, and he is glad to limp bowing away as best he can. Formerly, the farmers say, when a dog entered a sheepfold at night, the timid creatures would run wildly about and cry piteously. Since the goats have been used to guard them, they form in line behind their sturdy defender, and seem to enjoy the fun.

Considerate. A California bear seems to have been so much of a gentleman as to quietly depart from a house when a lady told him that his room was better than his company. The Wood River Times tells the story, as follows: About ten o'clock in the evening a lady living in Wood River, California, was followed home by what she took to be a large Newfoundland dog. Arriving home, she paused at the door to open it, but it was some time before she succeeded. During this delay the animal got quite close to her, and as she seemed nervous, she called him in. Her surprise may be imagined when, on striking a light, she saw a huge bald-headed bear looking at her, showing his teeth as if grinning at her mistake. More dead than alive, the lady opened the door, and gathering her skirts as women sometimes do, began 'shooting' the bear. Bruin, as if appreciating the gravity of the situation, hurried out, whereupon the frightened lady fell into a chair, and did not recover her presence of mind for at least fifteen minutes, when she ran to a neighbor's and told of her adventure.

History Rewritten. As Queen Elizabeth, attended by Sir Walter Raleigh and a retinue of gilded courtiers, was one day walking through the streets of London she came to a particular muddy spot, which she hesitated to cross. Raleigh was about to throw down his cloak before her in order that she might cross dryshod, when he reflected that it was of costly velvet, lavishly ornamented with old lace, and so would infallibly be spoiled. Accordingly, with great presence of mind he whispered loudly to Sir Christopher Hatton that he had always contended, and would with his heart's blood maintain that her majesty had the smallest feet and neatest ankles in the world, and that the calumnious report that she wore eleven was a malignant invention of the Spanish court. Nor did the ruse fail of its effect, as the Virgin Queen, lifting her royal skirts with almost exaggerated enthusiasm, went through the puddle with characteristic resolution, and halting on the farther side shook her scepter under the nose of the Spanish ambassador, demanding of the astonished diplomat, with a royal oath: 'Are they eleven, you Romish dog? Are they eleven?'—G. T. L. in Life.

Forrest and Marco Bozzaris, Jr. We were talking the other day, says a writer in the New York Star, about Greeks, apropos to Bernhard's queer marriage with Damala, when I recalled a curious incident related to me by Edwin Forrest. I had gone on to Philadelphia to take my Christmas dinner with poor Forrest, and, of course, a call upon Forrest was in order. The veteran tragedian showed us through his picture gallery and I happened to please him by admiring his favorites, Napoleon on the Kremlin, and a pair of merry maidens bathing. I think they were. Presently we stopped in front of a portrait of Fitz Greene Halleck, with whom all three of us were acquainted when he served as a sort of Newnan Noggs in the office of the Astors. 'Who would have thought,' said Forrest, 'that such a chap as Halleck could have written Marco Bozzaris,' a poem that fires my blood whenever I recite those lines: 'Strike! till the last arrow flies! Strike for your altars and your lives! Strike for the green graves of your street! And strike your name upon the wall!'

And strange enough," he continued, "I met the son of Marco Bozzaris while I was in Greece. He had seemed to me a traditional personage; but to meet his son gave me a reality which I have never since lost." "What sort of a man was young Bozzaris?" I inquired. "Six feet two inches high," replied Forrest, "straight and slim as a palm-tree, a face like the antique; a modest air, of mainly beauty. Only a hero could have had such a son." "And was his mind equal to his physique?" "I could not tell at first. He spoke no English, and my French was not fluent. However, we managed to understand each other a little, and I told him about Halleck's poem. He had never even heard of it. The mood was on me, and, standing up in that Greek cafe, with not a soul near who knew English, I recited the whole of it to the son of the hero whom it had immortalized. Sir, he understood that I could see the blood thrill in his veins, his eyes flash lightning, the color come and go in his cheeks, and when my voice dropped and broke for the concluding lines, where Bozzaris sinks to sleep in death at the very moment of victory, the son's eyes filled with tears which dropped like diamonds on the ground as he gazed at me. Ah! country, air, in the universal language. But I should have liked Halleck to hear his poem recited by me to such an audience."

She will gladly answer enquiring sufferers on receipt of U. S. postage stamp.

Pickering College occupies a peculiar place among the educational institutions of Ontario. It is under Quaker management, and though doing good work, it never in any way forces itself into public notice. It has no parade exercises of any kind, neither operating noriciding formalities. No prizes are given, nor is there any marking system. Work is carried on in the belief that the students should work from love and not from fear or feelings of rivalry. Co-education is attended to, and the authorities claim to have the best library in the Province outside of the University of Toronto.

A whicker dye must be convenient to use, easy to apply, impossible to rub off, elegant in appearance, and cheap in price. Buckingham's Dye for the Whickers unites in itself all these merits. Try it. There are 51 purely mutual fire insurance companies in Ontario, according to the last report of the inspector for 1883. These companies do a business ranging from $65 per annum up to $14,000. The average income of the 51 is only a little over $5,048, so it can plainly be seen a number of them are not crowded with business. The majority of these companies are township and county societies and do no business outside of their respective municipalities. As far as a number of them are concerned, according to the report, they can only have a nominal existence and are too weak to combat any heavy losses. The truth is there are too many companies to do the business and remain on a safe footing. Think of companies whose income from all sources is only $63, odd; $169, $154, &c.

The sure effect of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is thorough and permanent. If there is a lurking taint of scrofula about you, Ayer's Sarsaparilla will dislodge it, and expel it from your system.

A writer in Harper's Weekly thus lays down a plan of ventilation which he claims will materially alleviate the distress caused by summer heat. The plan is so simple that many are in a position to profit by its application if it possesses any efficacy, and we have no reason to doubt that it does. The night air is generally from five to twenty degrees cooler than that of the day. His plan is to store up this cooler air of the night for utilization during the day, in cases where space will permit of it. The plan is simply this: Open the windows during the night and cool down those apartments not being used to the temperature of night air. At sunrise close all the southern windows and protect them with shades. Leave windows on the opposite side sufficiently open from above for ventilation and keep the doors shut. In this way you shut in the cool night air and if you shut in enough of it you can keep your house cool all day. Ordinarily the temperature can be reduced 15 deg. by following out this plan.

SAVED FROM THE SCALPEL. A Toronto lady, Mrs. Berkenshaw, contracted a disease of the knee joint and was advised to submit it to a surgical operation by the best physicians attending; all other treatment having failed, when Hayward's Yellow Oil was tried and speedily effected a cure. It is the unfailing remedy for accidents and emergencies, and is for external use.

Our Canadian Silk Industry is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the case of the most important article of sewing silk. The great demand in Canada seems to be for a cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs. Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these the highest quality is the most important for the home use, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding, Paul & Co.'s own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best.

Later winter reports from the different States showed that in nearly all of them, while the weather was not so steady as in Ontario, there were greater extremes of cold, the thermometer registering often lower in the southern States than in Toronto. During the late cold dip considerable loss was done in the wool-growing parts of Ontario, but in parts of New York State loss formed three-quarters of an inch thick. At Danvers, N.H., the ground was frozen solid, and in other places in that State there were several inches of snow. This is a worse record than any part of settled Ontario can show. Evidently the idea that the climate becomes more unbearable with every inch towards the north is wrong. The people of the States immediately south of Canada look upon this country as a land of everlasting cold. The people of southern Ontario look upon the unsettled part of the province of the north in much the same way. Perhaps time will show that they too are mistaken.

A CELEBRATED CASE. The remarkable case of W. A. Egan, of Frankville, who suffered from disease of the liver and kidneys so badly that all hope of recovery was abandoned. He remained ten and thirteen days without cessation of the horrors. Four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters restored his perfect health, which he had not known for twenty years before.

Accounts from all portions of the country speak of an admirable condition of the crops in Canada. Though it is far too soon to predict much concerning the final result, yet it is well that the season has opened so favorably. Owing to the coolness of the period, and general cloudiness that has prevailed, the plant has had time to take good root before being tickled by the sun's rays into an upward growth. The firm rooting of the young plant is the initial step leading to ultimate success. In the absence of it there is little chance for a good result; but when it has been duly accomplished, the chances of obtaining a large crop and a sound crop are greatly multiplied. Of course there are accidents of the season which none can foresee, which none can avert or avoid. But as absolute certainty is an element which none can count upon, so the results of harvest operations must be left to delectable vicissitudes, when the time that the fields will be white with grain has come. Taking things as they are, there is every reason for indulging in a spirit of hopefulness.
