ERICA'S SACRIFICE.

The sound came closer and yet closer, till Philip could see the horse and rider tearing down the roadway from Kingston at a pace which would give the most...

she deemed, if she were to be faithful to her trust. "I have been hiding since last night," Arnold said, sitting up and speaking rapidly...

CHAPTER VIII.

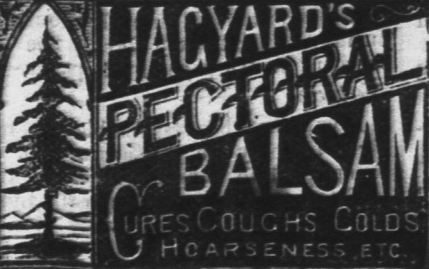

IN HONOR AND DISHONOR, NOT COUNTING THE COST. It was not till the afternoon that a messenger brought a few lines from Philip to Erica St. John, and as she read them her heart seemed to stand still.

"What was that?" she faltered, "is this his man?" "I know nothing," answered Philip. "I can only conjecture. I cannot say more now, there is no time."

"I know nothing," answered Philip. "I can only conjecture. I cannot say more now, there is no time."
