He would maintain a continual pressure on the pipes and prepared at a moment's notice to increase it for fire purposes to the highest point compatible with safety to pipes and pumps. He proposed to have the first providing that upon trial they prove satisfactory. He proposed to have the first named pumps placed in position and connected with the mains before removing the pumps to be put in Saddler, Dundas & Co.'s mill, so that no damage might occur from their removal. He would guarantee to keep pumps and works in arst class order and to keep a man continually on watch in the pump house.
