Extino Honey.—A couple of weeks ago two farmers who reside not far from Midland decident to set up a job on one of our merchants and have a good feed of honey for nothing. On several occasions one of them asked the merchants if he would give him all he could eat for 10 cents, but he did not ears to fill him with honey at that price. About two weeks ago the two walked into the store and offered to bet a quarter each and the price of the honey that they could eat three pounds. The money was put up, the honey weighed, and they were handed spoons to proceed with their contract. After swallowing a half dozen spoonsful one of them concluded that he was not quite prepared get to hand it his checks for the next world and preferred to remain a little world world and preferred to remain a little longer on the farm. The other was cuite willing to rick everything for a stomach full of honey, and ate away antil he began to change colors and teel very sick. He fluished it all except about half a pound. They lost their quarters, had to pay for the honey, and were so sick that they could not attend church on Sunday. Free Press.

enthusiastic Scotchmen with their friends held their annual celebration in the Spencer hall on Tuesday evening. This consisted of an excellent supper, prepared by Mr. Henson, our young and enterprising baker. After this came the usual round of teasts. Can it be that the Scotch element is lacking in its usual enthusiasm? No. We will either believe that they have of late been doing such an immense business in "24 lbs. of sugar for $1" as to render many of them untit for Messra, P. Mesweyn, N. Campbell, J. Cave, K. > Boyd, Wednesday, and were agreeably received. After explaining their mission in a clear, straightforward way Mr. Boyd thanked the committee for coming at once, direct to himselt, and giving him the benefit of their views so freely and openly expressed. He was not awars of the condition of affairs, but being now in full possession of all the information the committee had kindly given him he was in a po-sition to deal with the matter, and he certainly would do so. The exact course to be taken was a matter for the consideration of his firm; he could not speak to that, off hand, but he could say that a remedy of some kind should be supplied at the earliest moment, so as to ensure satisfaction to the neighborhood. The committee then thanked Mr. Boyd for his cordial reception and withdrew pleased with their interview.
