The Old Home.

"Return, return," the voices eried. "To your old valley, for away! For eattly on the river tide The tender lights and shadows plays And all the banks are gay with flowers, And all the hills are awast with theme For ean not had men bloom as ours fa your bright foreign elimel"

For me, I thought, the olives grow, The sun lies warm upon the vines; And yet, I will arise and so To that dear valley dim with pines! bid loves are dwelling there, I said. Patenched by years of change and Old faiths, that I had counted dead, Shall rise, and live again.

And still, "Roturn, roturn," they sung, "With he abides eternal ealm; In these old helde, where you were young. We call the heart's case and the balm; For us the flocks and herds increase, and children play around our feet; At see the sun goes down in peace-Return, for rest is sweet,"

Then I arese, and crossed the sea, And sought that home of younger days No love of old was left to me, (For lave both wings, and seldom stays;) But there were graves upon the hill, tad sunbeams shining on the sod, And ow winds breathing, "Peace, be still; Les things are found in God,"

IERY AND MANTLE PREPARATI

We are now making very active preparations for the coming season in our Millinery and Mantle Department.

MISS AIRD, who is in charge of this department, is now in the city with the object of obtaining every information relative to the coming season.

A marked feature this season is the great efforts which are being made to obtain effects dissimilar to those of former years, and as a result it has introduced a large variety of new material A marked leature this season is the great enerts which are being made to obtain effects dissimilar to those of former years, and as a result it has introduced a large variety of new material which show a great deal of colors—bright colors evidently will be in favor in all classes of trimming goods.

Hate still continue to be large, and very much varied in shape; and are showing in all the popular dress goods colors. They are well adapted to display, Fancy Feathers, Tips, Aigrette and Tufte that will be used in very bright colors and unique shapes. Gilt cord to finish the edge of hats also seems to be in favor this season. Ribbons, many of which are very handsome, also show the tinsel effects. Plain velvets and plushes still hold a prominent place. A somewhat New Make of plush, distinguished by a bold stripe is among the rich trimmings, especially in fancy colors. These hints we simply drop as an indication of what may be expected.

No grain worth speaking of has been offered for sale as yet, in the county, nor will there be for three weeks yet. Meantime everything is pure speculation. The large European and American grain mainpulators will want to keep down prices at the opening of the season, knowing that many farmers are tourous of solling early. It is advisable, however, to hold the grain for a few weeks.
