Barron and the Combina-

Barron is pushing his canvass with hat deal of energy, but unfortunately particular he expected his triend who soled him to display considerable cirapportion and tact as he felt his way nigh the riding. He seems to have how he is regarded by the people, while it is well known that he is a ober of the established or Church, he goes on paying the dissenters in a at will thoroughly expose his show the use he intends to Mr. Barron in his to obtain a spat in the House of ne should not forget that he lacks estionality and the ism to take well or rank and file of the Paten; Comnational prejudice and reli-with one of the pure breed and after all what real claim has Mr. on upon the reform party. He is at only a convert to the new political and why should others who have arefully brought up in that faith is second nature to them, stand r him. It is habits, Education, percoundings are all opposed to his ority that he does not even profess it friends, only so far as local or incial politics is concerned, as regards Dominion he is with Sir John and as bervative as ever. The position Mr. on has placed himself in is that of thu of the political cuckeo laid in the season with season with the season with season wit political cuckeo laid in the the scandious and outrageous manner it has been, without consulting someone in the riding that might be affected by it. So far from feeling ashamed of the insult, offered to those of whom he now asks favors, he even boasts of the part he played in the disgraceful transaction. The last is, the party never heard from Lindsay only in regard to getting out the vote. In any other matter they are never consulted, the combination has done the business for them, and they have done it to their own advantage. It have done it to their own advantage. It is now the intention of the independent reformers to put a stop to this, and show the combination that they possess themselves. This being the case Mr. Barron need not count upon their votes, besides he could not take the remainder of the McClennan vote, for it was represented that he was a member of the old Kirke, and many conservatives voted for him and many conservatives voted for him upon that consideration alone, but even that poor advantage Mr. Buron would not have, and his chances very much lessened over with the Q C., for an op-ponout. But if Mr. Fairbourn or the Warten could by induced to take the field, Mr. Barron and the Patent Combination would be fouted horse and foot by the first fire. The party cry is not as potent as it was, the people are beginning to look more to the man and less to the party. The candidate must show that his interest is ilentical with that of the electors, that any measure which would benefit him could not injure them, that his character and standing was such that any deviation from the straight line of political rectitude would involve him in en earth could be; such disgrace and ruin that he would not be likely to part from it. But in the name of common sense what interest, her well the even'g when she gave | what shadow of interest, or even pretense of interest can a lawyer for the town of Lindsay have in common with the farmers of North Victoria, He has no interest with them whatever, his interest is in them, and that is by using their votes to secure to him place, emolument, and power. March 8th, 1886.
