It is said that Mr. Mowat has turned very cranky with his loval henchman, poor Mr. McIntyre, and snubbed him bewhen he brought in a measure to curtail the expenses of coroner's holding inquests.
Had he at that time made a reduction of his own salary with that of his colleagues, say one third, it would have been a real saving to the country of a large amount, and been more decent and honorable than the centemptible cheese-paring policy pro-posed and carried out by the honorable gentleman. It is the general belief that the ministers and other high officials are in a becoming manner.

Mr. Mowat is centralizing power as fast as possible; that appears to be his ambition and aim; he neglects no opportunity to do so, and if not checked he will soon be the little despot of Ontario. What-ever move he makes turns in that direction. He has now the appointing of license inspectors and commissioners division court clerks and bailiffs. In little while it will be township clerks and pathmasters, and when the people have become accustomed to the innovation, he will seize upon the remainder and appoint the municipal council and their officers. Then will have come the year of jubilo, then will the patent com-bination flourish in all its glory, then will national prejudice and religious big-otry rule supreme, and then will intoler-ance and hate be let loose to rule and ruin the country.

No one believes there is any real difference between the Mr. Mowat and his follower, they have no regard for any other and they as cordially hate and despise every one else as they love themselves.

And why not? They are both secondand why not? They are both second-rate men taken up in an emergency, they have both come to the surface like bubbles of gas from a slough of political corruption and being birds so much of a feather they will no doubt in their little nest agree to will no doubt in their little nest agree to take any good thing the party may provide them. This seeming difference is only bumkum to give our member a show of independence of which everyone knows he does not possess the smallest particle or any thing resembling it. If he had he would not have allowed a minister for his own purpose, to make him the butt of the House and the laughing stock of the country. So much is our member under the control of the premier so obedient to his will and risk that should he desire him to stand on his head upon the clerk's table he would undertake the ridiculous performance. shelter to winter crops.

Every farmen should plant along the north and west sides of his farm to shelter it from the winds. These should be mixed evergreens and deciduous trees.

Along the shaded side of such grass might be grown to prevent loss of ground.

Evergreens are best planted in early June or just before they begin to grow.

Do not leave the roots exposed. The underbrush should be allowed to grow and cattle kept out. Mr. Phipps concluded a most instructive oration by reviewing the financial advantages of tree planting in other parts.

Mr. M. Moyer of Georgetown, followed on the subject of "Creameries and how to run them." The lecturer compared cheese and butter making from a financial who are more idle, insolent and overbearing than their masters ought to be. It is high time this filthy nest of unclean birds was effectually and thoroughly cleaned out, less in number, but better men put in their places, men who would feel the responsibility of their positions, and would endeavor to disabate the comparation of the co overpaid considering the state of the cheese and butter making from a financial country, or the work to be done, and that children are the prettiest, when in reality the butter may be very bad and the child-ren very homely. He showed how women ren very homely. He showed how women are not encouraged. A farmer did not grudge $100 for a reaper or seeder to use only a couple of weeks yearly to save his back; but his wife had to put up with any kind of a system to make her butter.

In creameries the cream is collected three times a week and measured by a common rule: Therefore there is very little trouble or expense to the farmer's wife. He expected to have an instrument wife. He expected to have an instrument to measure cream by next year. That was now the only irritating thing about a creamery—all people were not good skimmers and some even were hardly houest. He illustrated a patent can with escape valve for skimming milk. It draws off the milk from the bottom. Each farmer should have an ice house. Around

In making butter the cream should be about 60 degrees temperature and should be churned carefully. Stop when butter looks like fine shot and draw eff buttermilk slowly. Wash with cold water of 55 degrees. Use dairy salt and mix well after salt has stood in butter for some after salt has stood in butter for some hours. One ounce per pound is correct quantity. Tin lined tubs are the best. In raising the cream the milk cans should be submerged in cold water.

Mr. Fee followed with a most practical and humorous article on Farm Implements. He referred to old time farming in Canada and to India now. Their wants were few and farming was successful.

Farmers are now poor on account of machinery. They are machinery poor.
Every farmer would do with fewer implements than he now has. They are left around the fences and fields and go to ruin. Rot, rust and interest are ruining farmers. He related some interesting stories about implement agent and brought the blush to the cheeks of several of that
