The Victoria Warder FRIDAY, JULY 16, 1886.

In Memory of our late Bro. S. Smyth. He is one of our number that's taken,

God called him, he could not remain; Oft a sigh for his sake will be given, When we meet, and ne'er see him again. And in lodge, Oh, how often we'll miss

When we look on his now vacant place; And think that in this world forever, We will never more gaze on his face.

He is gone, but ever his memory
Will be green in our heart's despess In the future we'll think, and then whis-

'Tis a pity our comrade's no more.

He was brave, noble-hearted and true
To his home, his country and queen,
Till the death angel summoned his soul; Now he sleeps neath a low mound of it was hard to observe one so young, Crushed to death 'neath those great iron wheels: And the mother that mourns for her son, Who can picture the anguish she feels!

Yet, in heaven, bright home up above, We trust that his spirit's at rest; Where's he's waiting for those that he loves, To join him in the realms of the blest, And when life's weary journey is o'er,

And we meet beyond the shining river,

There'll be sorrow and parting no mere,
We will dwell with our brother for ever -J. Mersot.

OLOSED. — Our school closed on Wednesdey, June 20th. An examinstion was held in the afteroom, at which were present a large number of visitors. All seemed thoroughly pleased with the progress made by the children. Shortly before the close a number of specimens of writing were placed in the hands of the gentlemen present for judgment. An interesting scene took place. However, after some discussion, the majority gave a decision in favor of the specimen produced by Mies Betsy Murchison, as it coutained more of the essential elements of good writing than the others. The names of three others in order of merit were Annie McNabh, Mary McEachern, and Rocie Elford. The writing of the others was considered ation was held in the aftercoon, at writing of the others was considered good, notwithstanding the disadvantages afforded by bad seating.
