He gave as the ground of objection that he favored Home Rule on the basis of he favored Home Rule on the basis of Gladstone's bill, and to meet the Loyalist delegates would be stultifying himself. He therefore withdrew his name. His henchman, C. D. Barr, editor of the Post, tried to follow in the same line, but wandered off from Moses to Mr. Gladstone. He consured the sender of the tone. He censured the sender of the notices—they were sent only to the pro-testant churches—for not giving one to the roman catholic clergyman. The incident shows how well he is kept posted Vicar General Laurent had not been notified. Mr. Barr also eulogized French Canadians, stating that they stood ahead of Ontario's citizens in literary talent. These and several other new and truly wonderful matters quite foreign to the meeting were dwelt on by that gentleman. He spoke four times, twice to questions of his own creation and twice in explanation of what he had said. It is a square of the notices knew that and competition took place. The time was enjoyably spent in camp, there being a great deal of rain, hard work and amusement. Never before in Canadian military annals was there such an orderly camp. There was tar less than the usual amount—never very large—of drinking; and what was done was done out of sight. No cases of punishment were recorded. These facts speak volumes for Deputy Adjutant General Villiers, his staff and the officers commanding corpa.

The discipline in regard to both officers and men was rigid concerning absence from camp. No officer was allowed out during drill hours or after hours at night, without a pass signed — not by the from camp. No officer was allowed out during drill hours or after hours at night, without a pass signed — not by the colonel of his corps—but by no less than the Commandant himself, Col. Villiers. On several occasions officers high up in rank were sent back; on other occasions they were held at the entrance to camp.

The review before General Middleton the third day of camp was very fine. But the two great events of camp were the march out through Kingston and the field day and attack on Fort Henry. The march out was on Wednesday, 15th inst. The whole force, led by Col. Villiers, Col. Graveley, and Brigade Major Hughes, paraded Kingston. The following order was observed: 4th regiment of cavalry, under Col. Duff, a splendid body of men well mounted; Kingston field battery, under Capt. Drennan, a young Kingstonian, whose first year in command has brought the battery right up to the front; Durham field battery, under Major McLean, of which corps we say something elsewhere; 16th Prince Edward battalion; 45th West Durham and Victoria; 49th Hastings; and 14th Princess of Wales, Kingston.

The march was along King street, past the march was along King street, past

Kingston.

The march was along King street, past the park, along the lake front, past Col: Villiers' residence, towards the penitentiary; thence after a rest the troops passed to Princess street, the leading one of Kingston, down which they marched in column. The sight coming down the hill was truly grand. The marching of the 45th battalioa, led by its magnificent band, was almost perfect, and was second only to the two companies of the 14th, which have been for 14 months in barracks. They were perfect.

The time of the Durham Field Battery is the time of the Durham Field Battery is the best in Canada, and entitles them to the Trophy, a massive silver one. The Field Battery, especially Major McLean, Lieut. Twigg and the Manvers and Peterboro men, may well feel proud. Our Position as a Public Journal.

London the other day, render it incumb-ent upon the Mail to define its position as a public journal. Since it passed into the hands of its present owners the Mail has been an independent Conservative jouripulated by a certain set of politicians—it The Mail is and for nine years has been wholly and absolutely independent of all governments and politicians whatsoever; governments and politicians whatsoever; and, owing nothing airectly or indirectly to them, or to their influence, it has not suffered them to dictate its course upon any question of high or low degree; but has everywhere and always asserted its right to think and to speak for itself. This position the Mail will continue to account our concention of the true funcoccupy, our conception of the true func-tions of a great public journal inclining us more and more to the belief that the SOANES'.—40-1.

public interests are better served by free and healthful criticism than by undis-criminating devotion to one aide or the We have said that since the change which took place in its ownership in 1877 the Mail has chosen, as an independent paper, to give a general support to the interests of the Conservative party, of which Sir John Macdonald is the honored leader, its conviction being that, on the whole, his policy was the policy best calculated to advance the welfare of Canada. But it was almost inevitable, considering the perfect treedom of our position that time arise between him and us. As may be gathered from Sir John's remarks at London we differ from him just now upon a question of very great moment.

Though not conscious of being influenced in the remotest degree by religious bigotry, the mail is nevertheless persuaded that a crisis in our affairs is at hand, in The largest company in size of men and in numbers that was in any corps in camp was Capt. Brown's from Cartwright. They were also second to none in drill or in conduct. He had one man over the would grant to every church the utmost would grant to every church the utmost would grant to every church the utmost and action within latitude of thought and action within legitimate bounds; but the vast organization of which we speak is everywhere invading the domain of civil government and undermining the authority of the state. In Quebec that church is the state church, licensed to invoke British law for the collection of tithes and of the law for the collection of tithes and of the onerous assessments she levies upon the people for the erection of her edifices. The temporal and spiritual privileges which she enjoys, enormous and exorbitant beyond any Old World parallel at present exhisting, enable her to control the Provincial Legislature, as well as the great majority of the French members in the Dominion Parliament. The Riel existsion in Onebee has revealed the agitation in Quebec has revealed the presence of a concealed imposshume more dangerous than an open wound. In Ontario, although she is here the Church of the minority, we see her holding the balance of power between the two parties, and wringing from the government of the day concessions to which shehas no sort of just claim. Why should His Grace Archishop Lynch be permitted to emasculate the Common school system of Upper Canada? Why should he be allowed to draw revenues for his religious orders from the public treesures, to tamper with Protesting to buy some, and go around in the actor actor in the morning till five in the afternoon. Let the boys have a day of it.

Many people do not like to have childern come to a fair because the toes are out of their shoes. Never mind that. Polish up the old ones and come along. Manvers, at Beth the Roman Catholic Church to keep within her proper sphere. She has no moral right to her extraordinary status in Quebec her existence as a state church being unjust alike to the habitant whom she crushes with her imposts, to the English speaking settler whom she is eradicating from the soil to make room for tithe-payers, and to the people of the whole Dominion who are of necessity affected by the liming done to a component part. She that they meet with no favor from the politicians on the other side. It is not improbable that the Mail may be compelled to differ from both sides on some other questions that are pressing for sole determination than has yet been evinced by either the Reform or the Conservative party. It sometimes happens that the journal which assumes an independent stand finds itself "between the incensed points of mighty opposites"-at variance nal. A mere organ—an instrument man- with friend and toe. But in dealing with the grave matters referred to we put our has not been: and we need scarcely add trust not in the politicians so much as its that at this stage in its career, when it is the enlightened conscience of the Canadian enjoying an unprecedented measure of people, who have never yet averted their public favor, it does not intend to assume faces from a good cause. Upon other is so unhappy, not to say so unworthy, a role. The statement made by a contemporary on Saturday, that the directors of the Mail by formal resolution some years ago placed its columns at the disposal of Sir John Macdonald, is a pure fabrication.

The Mail is and for wine years here been some point of the Conservative party, which has done so much for est advocate of the policy of the Conservative party, which has done so much for the material progress of this young com-munity. But the public will be good enough to understand that in all things, great and small, the Mail will not be an organ, but a thoroughly independent jour-nal, bound at any cost to give expression to its honest convictions, whilst treating we hope with becoming respect the opin-ions of all those on either side who feel
