Death of Summer.

Sweet summer was a maiden Well lov'd by you, and you; The shy old king of Frost Land Has pierced her poor heart through.

The Perfect Day.

The blast has swept the clouds away, The gloom, the fog, the rain; A white cloud floating high, Alone, celestial argosy.

Oh, when the blast of death has blown The clouds of time away, So may the shadows of our years— The gloom of all our griefs and fears— And wild regrets and bitter tears—

GLANDING.
