in Memoriam.

in memory of my beloved brother,

Oh, Robert, dear, good-bye, Our highly cherished one, Thy dwelling in the eky to bright as mid-day sun

But oh! sins! how dreary
le our shode helow,
Without a smile to cheer, the lears incessant how, No more thy graceful form shall meet our neeping eyes. Now safe from every storm, Then dwellest in the skille.

You to thair thy parting words, You requested as to most you to that happy land above.

The enter, an ante, an clear, No more sainted our ear, The singing songs above.

And I know we soon shall greet you, When our trials on earth are ever, We shall dwell and he together Ever on that happy shore,

Thy momory file our broast With many a tear and sigh.
Alan I that we must part And say, also I dear Robert, good-bye. -MAGGIR MYLER

He sleeps and on must sleep,
This Christ shall bid him rise;
He's gone his loved reward to reap,
To reign above the skies,

His dust on earth must lie,
His spirit he with frod,
Till joined to blossed unity
And quickened by Christ's word,

Together they shall rise,
At the archangel's blast,
And most the Naviour in the skies
Who is the First and Last,

Refere the indement bar He shall with nations stand, With those who come from near and far, A mixed, tremendons band,

Our friend's departure proved
Fo him a sweet release;
From serrow and distress removed,
He rests in perfect peace.

We do not count him lost,
But only gone before,
A few more years at very most
And we shall touch that shore

Which he has lately gained;
filest city, evermore
To be by all retained
When this life's tolls are o'er,

Then let this cheery thought
Anstain as in the spelle,
Ohrist, who three all his authering brots

Will enfoly bring us too,
For Christ is with his saints alway,
It is promise o'er is now.

Unto the end, He says, Above he ever lives and prays, Our intercessor tens.

Then let us trust him more
Than we have ever done,
And when this changeful life is e'er,
We'll hear his words, "We'll done!

OMEMBE.

LOYAL ARRENT.—Mr. McQuade's many friends will no doubt be pleased at the stead taken by that gentleman at Mr. Endepsth's meeting. Mr. McQuade has shown his manifress in accepting the decision of the convention, and throwing himself into the hare of the owner or mr. Endepsth's and received serious but not fatal injury.

Mr. John Jowell is still acanimal to the none, with himself into the hare of the conservative convention we advocated the claims of Mr. McQuade to the Conservative convention we advocated the claims of Mr. McQuade to the Conservative nomination; this we had a perfect right to do. Now the convention has been held, and we are willing to shade by the decision of that convention, as we know Mr. Endepsth would have been and that he would have worked as cheerfully if he had not been estected. The Post, now when it sees, as it thinks, a chance to make a break in the Conservative party in Emily, also advocates his claims. What would is have said if Mr. McQuade had received the nomination. From the Post's past record our readers may imagine. Under the mask the cloven foot is plantly seem. Now I don't wish to be under-stood as referring to their personal sppearance but let us examine their po-litical appearance, and well, what is it? Brudder Bones' description of "de politicum" seems to suit them very well. He says: "He am like de fles in de fac' dat you nebber knows what to kotch him, wen you tink he am dar you look an he aint dar at all he am seems to keep the saint dar at all he am seems to keep the saint dar at all he am seems to keep the saint dar at all am dar you look an' he aint dar at all he am somewhar else." When Riel was a prisoner every Grit paper and every Grit ornior was screaming, "The old fox, Sir John, will find a way to let him escape and should be turned out for it." Now was not that the fill a way to let Riel escape. The Government gave every chance to Riel's symposthicars to have his asset. is Risi's sympathizers to have his case searching enquiry as to the merica of his case in all its hearings, nor the shadow of an excuse was found for him and he was executed. When he the Crite discovered that he was a patriot and that his execution was mor der. This, to eatch the French vote, and every artifice likely to arouse the resentment of the French understood the truth in the case there would be no Riet agitation at all. But this line of action don't seem to take very well with their followers in Ontario, and now when the elections are coming on they are trying to get up a side show to draw attention from the mein issue. They ery with uplifted hands and their eyes rolled up to holy horror. Curruption! Boodle. What is boodle? When Mr. Mackensie ruled the roost and some men who had done a good horoughly sitted, and after the mean When Mr. Mackenale ruled the roost and some men who had done a good deal of missionary work for the Ontario Government (I think they were called Oliver, Davidson & Co...) got the wink to purchase a block of land on the Ramunistigua river at 70c. per acre and erect thereon certain elab shartles and call the same the Neebing Motel, and Mr. Mackensie then found that he could not do without that particular plot of ground and paid the said missionaries several thousand deliars for their "little venture." We are pleased to state that Mrs. Reynolds, who has been unwell for the past two weeks, is again convalescent.... Mr., George Smith is also so far recovered as to be able to resume his usual avocations.

GOODERHAM.

Special to The Warder, A surfous accident happened to Mr. Wm. Madill, lately in Boyd & Co's lumber camp. It seems he was chopping a tree, when it slipped off the stump and cancht his foot against a log on the ground, crushing it pretty badly. He is getting around all right under the care of Dr. Giles of Haliburton.

Dr. Giles of Haliburion.

We are beginning to take more interest than heretofore in our voters list on account of the elections. We know of eight names not on the list, all supposed to be conservatives, and residents of the township from eight to ten years and owning land; while some are on the list who have not been in the township for a year and who are likely on the reform side. It seems as if there was something wrong about it, as there was no revising
