the Doctor met the Squire in Lindsay, and were joined by a gentleman from Oakwood, who expressed the same views and fully agreed with the other two, that there was a Combination in Lindsay which held an improper control of the party and especially of the mariposa vote, and they would take no part in the meetings other than that of mere spectators, so they could take an independent course in the future. The first was an informal meeting at the Benson House when Dr. Clarks in reply to some remarks from D. J. Melintyre expressed some dissatisfaction of the gent control of the gent c
