192 IN JULY.

There were added to our liets in July, no less than one number and WINETY Two bone fide new subscribers. Advertisers will please note that they are chiefly from the district trading into Lindsay, and not from Mara, or some other factious settlement.

HALIBURTON CO.

Next week THE WARDER will contain a map of Haliburton county, the same in plan as those already given. As Haliburton is included in Victoria for electoral purposes; is reached from here by its only railway; is rich in iron and other ore; is yet well time bered: and is settled by a fine people, it is of more than ordinary interest to the people of Lindsay and Victoria. Look-out for the Haliburton map.

NEIGHBORS-GRANGE AND

Recently a contemporary delivered an article on Orangeism under the eaption "To Hell with your Neighbor." The heading was strong, and might indicate a spirit beneath that, under the old regime, might change "your neighbor" into "King William," or "constitutional government."

We believe in Orangeism, just as we believe in churches, temperance societies, Freemasonry, etc. Any citisen of any nation whose principles are that the people of the land, and not a few bishops, cardinals or lay aristoerate, should rule, is in spirit an Orangewan. He is protestant in the true sense. Every man is pledged to maintain his individuality, and to reslet tyranny in church or state. The and religious liberty.

As temperance, Masonic and church organizations are the advanced guards of certain work, so Orange institut are the heralds of constitutional government and religious independence

Many point to the fact that Orange celebrations sometimes produce hos tempers. True, but the memories kindled are not the ordinary kind. The stories of "Fierry" and "Enniskillen," which lay the foundation for the civil governments of not only Great Britain, but also United States. Creat Britain, but also United States, Canada, France, and every country governed by the people, those stories are sufficient to thrill any man. And no one means ill-wilf to his neighbor. Orangeism aims to build up a system, and of course to destroy in a legitimate manner all others opposed thereto. Hence the enmity of Rome. But the day to fear Rome's enmity is happily departing. The members of that church are becoming more and more independent every year. They are gradually developing Orange principles, i. e., civil and relations.

If it is wrong to comment on such things, then we respectfully protest, and demand a change in the law; for we mean to protest if such things arise, and do not wish to commit "contempt of court." Will Mr. Mowat, or Sir John, therefore, kindly fix up the law?—or appoint only such persons to office as will not merit such criticism?

Meantime under such auspices dustice might wipe her eyes, blow her nose, and sit on Q. E.

THE RECENT DROWNING.

The sad drowning accident of last Saturday night, detailed in another column is unparalleled in the history of these waters. The unfortunate party ventured in a frail canoe, though Mr. Goodwin had expressly requested that a very large one be taken; they tried to cross a lake at night when help could not be summoned; they faced waves and a tempest before which steam yachts and large skiffs quailed; and the result was inevitable. The lady was jealous of her fair name, and rightly so. She was bent on reaching her mother's tent that night despite wind and waves; while the young men brave in danger almost to being foolhardy, inspired by that chivalrous spirit still dominant in British breasts, and full of the daring characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon, were only too willing to run the risk. The rest is told. Now for the moral. Our plan is to let each one draw his own,

On the fatal night a party, Miss Carroll, and Mesers. Cameron and Thos, Sanders, left Lindsay, in a cance to proceed to a camp near Cedar Springs, where Mrs. Carroll and her family, with others, friends of young Cameron, were encamped. Owing to its being Saturday night, Miss Carroll could not leave until after ten o'clock, she being in charge of Killaby's new restaurant and fruit store, (late Laing's). It had been arranged that Mr. Joseph Brown would meet the party at the mouth of the river and take Miss Carroll over in his boat, a safe one, as the night was windy; but on arrival at the light-house, Mr. Brown waited for some time and being later than the appointed hour, thought the party had landed at Pleasant Point close to hand. Thither he went, and remained till the wind lulled long after midnight. Several times he proposed to go out towards the light-house to meet the party for he felt uneasy. But he was strengthened in the belief that the party was sheed by an assurance from a camp at "Nigger Island," that a boat had passed before him.

The reason the young lady—an entire stranger to canoes and boating—gave, was that she a comparative stranger in Lindsay, might be the subject of criticism, and she desired to reach her mother's tent that night. Alas, her love of her fair name, her desire to avoid the appearance of evil cost the fair girl her life. Young Cameron, too, wished to crees for a similar reason, and also, he was a most expert canoeist and swimmer. Recently Mr. Wm. White purchased a Chatham binder from Mesara. Ferguson of Port Perry, and Logan of Lindsay. For some time it worked well; but, leaving it near the road one night, he found the canvas turnel, and the knotter fixed so that it would not tie tightly. On Wednesday Mesars. Ferguson and Logan came down and at once showed how the machine had been tampered with. In five minutes all was fixed and working well. Mr. White is well satisfied with the binder, and settled for it on the spot.
