they thought to show us out; but some of the more enlightened of them seeing their mistake, have lately influenced a majority here to buy over the influence of a very popular Canadian newspaper to set on their feet another prominent paper of the continent, thinking to gain credit for itself, and prestige for its party by following in the shade of the above mentioned paper, has shown to great advantage (7) the ability to be very patriotic when the party require it, but that is nothing. All of us know the Globe is wrong. This great and great advertiser, who has been in the city, but being a British colony whatever goods we make free coming from the United States must be free when coming from the Mother country. But England's export warehouses are filled not only with goods made at home, but also with goods made in France, Germany, Belgium, and in fact in every foreign country having any status in manufacturing competition. When, therefore, our legislators make a Reciprocity treaty with us, they open their ports to Canadian products and Canadian products only. But when we do open our ports, not only to American products, but to those of Great Britain and thereby to the whole world. That we should be able to stand on one side or an arrangement is simply impossible, and the proposal would be suicidal, and is one that we could not entertain for a moment.

Washington Letter. (From our regular correspondent.) Washington, D. C., Aug. 12, 1887. The welcome and decided change in the weather, predicted by the Signal office, to take place on Sunday, arrived on schedule time, in perfect condition, and the inhabitants of Washington are once more in that state of mind that enables them to declare life worth the living, and at night time to no longer wish for the morning, for since the thermometer has fallen from the nineties to the sixties sleep is possible in this sun-baked town. The strain has been too much for the President, however, and he finds that he cannot wait for October and his western trip until he leaves Washington and his executive duties again, so he has made an engagement with Senator Keena, of West Virginia, to go with him on a fishing excursion some time this month, to some one of the many beautiful fishing streams in West Virginia.

The United States Minister to France, ex-Governor Robert McLane, of Maryland, is in Washington on a leave of absence from his post of duty at Paris. He called upon the President and at the State Department on Wednesday. It is said that Minister McLane's return to the United States is to look after his private interests, which have suffered by his absence. Senator Evans, of New York, has recently become the purchaser of 300 acres of land near Washington, on the Maryland side of the Potomac river. The land adjoins a government reservation about 12 miles from the Capital, known as Fort Washington. It commands a fine view of the city and surrounding country. It is the New York Senator and great lawyer's intention to increase his property by the purchase of several hundred additional acres, and to erect a handsome country home near the west of government. His eldest son will be in charge of the property.

A complete report of the methods of conducting work in the Treasury Department has been prepared for the Senate departments. Secretary Fairbank will present his report to the Senate Committee on the Treasury, immediately upon the resumption of Congress or before, if the chairman so desires. Secretary Whitney absolutely refuses to allow the expenditure of any more money to repair the old ship "Monocacy." The secretary evidently believes in a new navy as well as a stronger one. A full blooded Omaha Indian is a clerk in the Interior Department. He has recently been promoted from a salary of $1,000 a year to one at $1,200 a year. His services have been efficient and he has merited the promotion. His name is Francis LaFlesche, and he often acts as interpreter for the Government.

The disbursing officers of the different departments had themselves frequently at variance with the second controller of the treasury in the settlement of their accounts. At the War Department, the recent purchase of a pair of horses for the use of the lieutenant between the two authorities. The officers of the War Department insist that the orders of the secretary and the president must be obeyed. On the other hand the second controller, Mr. Butler, says that orders from a superior, that are in direct contradiction to the Statute, cannot justify a disbursing officer in making a wrong disbursement of public money. The horses are now being paid for out of a wrong appropriation. Hence the controversy.
