Reading from the "Pontificate," (which he held in his hand) the obligation of a priest when being ordained, how that he would teach nothing but what had been approved of by the fathers of the church; in effect relinguishing the right to think for hims If, and requiring the flock to fully accept such teaching as the church may from time to time dictate, any depurtors from which would bring upon the offender's head the bitterest curses of the Pope. He showed how fallacions was the assumption that the fathers of the church were over a unit on many of the doctrines of Christianity, contending that then, as now, the difference of opinion was as wide, and quite as prenounced. Enlarging on this absolute surrender of individual thought and socion he vividly pictured its deplerable results. Disloyalty to the state, with fealty to Rome acknowledged, which was never more facknowledged, which was never more faily demonstrated than at the late inbiles service of Her Beloved Majesty Queen Victoria, in Britain's old and noble Face, Westminster Abbey, There in its broad sisler, beneath the shadow of the monuments of her illustrious dead, Stood representatives (WPTH ONE EXCEP MON ONLY) from every land, of every farth.
