Yes, you have heard something the same effect but not in the same words. Yet the statement loses nothing by repetition, and repetition is necessary to impress the truth firmly in your mind Therefore you will read this carefully, consider it well, and remember the lesson at a time when it may be of use to you.

To be brief-to put the matter in a nutshell. Our stock of Holiday Goods-Watches and Clocks, Silverware and Jewelry, Optical Goods and Spectacles, is very complete and attractive. To enlarge upon this text.—It is hardly necessary to remind you that Christmas comes but once a year. Perhaps you have observed that fact for yourself. It is a kind of habit that Christmas has fallen Likewise you know already that the festive season is almost within hailing distance, and that it should not be allowed to pass without due observance.

In addition to the universal jollification, this may manifest itself in the shape of a present of a sealskin coat to the good wife or a tin rattle to the baby; or John Augustus may just have reached that age when a watch would be extremely useful and appreciated by him. Perhaps Mary has her own Some fine English copies (by Rowney & Co., London) of Water Color Paintings, suitable for Wedding or Christmas Presents, at Claus, Esq., towards herself, and no doubt her ideas are entitled to consideration; while grandmother has not forgotten when she was Mary's age herself; and some evidence that she is not now forgotten in the general hilarity will be most acceptable to her. It is not the easiest thing in the world to decide on the most appropriate gift; but an examination of a wellassorted stock of goods especially adapted for presents-goods possessing the merits both of usefulness and beauty-will simplify matters amazingly and make the task a pleasant one.

We like to be abreast of the times, to keep the goods the people want in our line, and on inspec-tion of our stock you will find that

The Weather.

Weather report for the mouth of November,

That "Dishonest Farmer" Article. The following letter has been handed us for ablication. From it, it appears all the tatements in THE WARDER'S first article are true in every particular:-

Temperance on Swipes.

and money and personal effort has been expended all these years in rescuing him? What agency is trying to galvanize life into the class of men who have been held up to such contempt by my critic? Can there be the soul or sympathy of a human being in a man, who can make use of such repulsive statements, and who appears to held human. noon. A low, aweet treble steals over distance, which says the Lord God omit ent reigneth. The breath of Gethaems aweeping away the ignorance and supers of ages. The sacredness and important human life and hopes are in the ascending These warnings any Bible student can increase, and bounds this we have exampled total abstainers. Forty years in the widerness His people drank neither wise nor strong drink. The whole family of the Meanites, and Rachab, Daniel and his companions, Samson, Samuel, etc. Swipes would call these cranks. Pardon me, Mr. Compositor, for presenting the word. There are over 130 warnings against it as an evil and a curse And still there is another reason adduced why we should be abstainers: For the sake of our brother. See Romans 14, 21; L. Corinthians, 3, 13. We are our brother's keeper, (notwithstanding Swipes to the contrary) and the voice of his blood shall cry unto God from the ground, and we shall not be guitless. If the Lord Gd of Feaven and earth commended and exhorted men to abstain, the burthen of proof for a repeal rests with Swipes. What moral right has a government to condemn a vessel as unsesworthy? The owner offers no force to compel men to embark in her. Or railroads, or hundreds of other things on which the law lays its hand? Or prevent the sale of intexicants to boys? Now, Swipes, draw the line. If seventy-five percent, of those who cross a bridge have fallen through, then any corporation would be culpable who would not stop the traffic; and vastly more of the so called temperate men fall into intemperance. What moral right has a board of health to draw a cordon round a house mfeeted with small-pox, so as to prevent my entering it? Sinply because it will prove fatal to myself and the community. Why not let me self and men buy the virus? Dozens of men have had small-pox and re-vent my entering it? Simply because it will prove fatal to myself and the community. Why not let me sell and men buy the virus? Dozens of men have had small-pox and recovered. The saloons are the plague spots of modern society. Their songs and conversation are degrading and demoralizing. They are the graves of virtue, manhood and womanhood. Millions of the human race have died on their degraters. I have descent man would shrink from, ties of the poor man, and compel him to do that which a descent man would shrink from, on their door-steps, lured thither by men who lived to deatroy. Would Swipes point out a single village, a single home, that has been benefited by them? What guarantee an act he has not the moral and physical out a single village, a single home, that has been benefited by them? What guarantee can he give the community that he may not with pain we are discharging it, but there are no words too strong to be applied to such a curning, insignificant and unprincipled ultimately become a wreck himself? No moral right to stop such a gigantic swindle? Would Swipes point out in whom is this vested right? Is Swipes exercising a moral or a legal right over the drunkard when he places him in the prison? He does not force him to abstain. Of no, let him have his liberty. I imagine I hear Swipes saying to an efficer: "TII hire you for a year. You watch that saloon over there, and as soon as you see a man the least bit unsteady, bring him before me and I will give him a year in the Central prison and hard labor, the ——, etc. But mind the criminal line is unsteadiness. Two men enter; both drink the same quantity with different results, one is arrested, the other goes on. All right, Swipes, moral law. And then I think I hear him say, "It is the thinking power we are required to get etc. But mind the criminal line is unsteadiness. Two men enter; both drink the same quantity with different results, one is arrested, the other goes on. All right. Swipes, moral law. And then I think I hear him say, "It is the thinking power we are required to get at, and that can't be done by act of parliament, backed up by the whole power or force of the realm," whilst in another place he says, "the law would set him to think." I don't know, but I imagine Swipes is in his dotage. Reconcile. The legal right I discussed in a previous article, which I would state in a sentence. I believe a governing body, especially elected by the vote of the people, has a legal right to pass any law which they may think best for the community. They are the legal representatives in whom is vested to call the trio, I have also answered, and can't afford to waste any more ink on it.
