Yes, thou art changed since first we met,
But think not I shall ere regret,
The' never can my heart forget,
The charms that once were thine.
For, Marian, well the cause I know,
That sloie the lustre from thine eye,
That proved thy heauty's secret foe,
And pal'd thy checke carnation dye;
What made thy health, sweet Marian, fly,
Was auxious care for mine,

Yes, Thou Art Changed.

Yes, o'er my couch I saw thee bend,
The duteous wife, the tender friend,
And each espricious wish attend,
With soft incessant care.
Then trust me, love, that pallid face,
Can beast a sweeter charm for me,
A truer, tend'rer, dearer grace,
Than blooming health bestow'd on thee;
For there thy well-tried love I see,
And read my blessing there.

The sun was but a few hours high on Tuesday morning when the veterans of the Battle of Limeridge assembled around the monument in Queen's Park erected to the memory of those of their comrades who fell at Ridgeway on June 2, 1866, while repelling the Fenian invaders. The pedestal was bedecked with numerous wreaths of flowers, the base of the monument was covered with palms and foliage plants, the surrounding trees were beautiful with the tints they wear in leafy June and no other month of the year, while the velvety carpet surrounding the monument, revivified by recent rains, served to make the spot one of the most delightful character.

THE citizens here were surprised to hear your townsman, Mr. Barron, whom they were led to believe was a champion of Equal Rights. But it appears that he is only an equal righter in Quebee politics, as he is in favor of French schools, catholics appointing a trustee on high school board and giving no other sect the privilege, and all the other one sided amendments the Mowat Government have added to the school law. In fact it was disgusting to hear him. He told two anecdotes, one about an Irishman that wished to be buried with his face leaning to Biddy and, the other fits him so well that it is the general opinion here that he had it applied to himself and that it sticks to him like a blister, and to ease his mind he tries to fit it to some other person, but it still sticks to himself. The anecdote is that a dog got cut in two by the train. A vendor of glue was present who picked up the two parts, stuck them together with his glue and the dog was all-right, only the msn in his haste had the hind end with the legs up; but it turned out only a matter of convenience to the dog feet and when he got tired turned over and trotted on the hind ones. So Mr. Barron trots on the front feet at Ottawa voting Equal Rights, etc., and turns tail up in Ontario advocating special rights. What will the loyal men of North Victoria think of him now?
