Sin,—As your paper has previously taken an interest in the forestry movement, I shall be obliged by your laying these few lines before your readers:

The value of preserving a proper amount of forest throughout the country is now well known, and last spring, while travelling through several districts of Ontario, I saw much progress being made in planting trees both for shelter and ormanent. I should have travelled through most of Ontario to observe what was heing done in this line, but was prevented by an illness of some months' duration. I should be very glad, therefore, if some of my old correspondents or others would of my old correspondents or others would take the trouble to send me a reply to the following questions for use in my next forestry report, a copy of which will be sent to all who snewer:

(1) Whether and to what extent lines of trees for windbreaks or ornaments are being planted and how those planted are thriving.

(2) Whether plantations of young trees have been set out and how they succeed.

(3) Whether cartle are fenced out from any portions of forest in your neighbor-hood and how it answers.

(4) Any difference in climate, rainfall.

The following from the United States official report explains itself;

"The greatest bindrance to the export trade in live cattle is the regulation of the British (lovernment requiring that all American cattle shall be slaughtered on the docks within a period of ten days after they are landed. This prevents the owner from holding them until they can recover from the effects of the voyage and notil the market is in the best condition for selling. Causdian cattle, which are allowed to enter England without any restrictions, are said to yield the shipper from who gives you seat in car or omnibus, and to anybody, in any station of life, unobstructive manner.

strictions, are said to yield the shipper from $10 to $15 per head more than can be realized from steers shipped from the United States. The effect of this difference in returns is very $16 to $15 per head more than can be realized from steers shipped from the United States. The effect of this difference in returns is very marked, both upon our trade and upon the market value of cattle in the United States if our shippers were able to secure $10 or $15 per head more for their animals it would of course stimulate the trade, and they would be that without any effect on her part they are only what we deserve. Now this is the wrong way of looking at it, and some day it will serve that girl right—that girl who believes that the good things of life in the way of politeness are here lawfully, and the world is too small for falseness to find a niding-place; and history should impress her that life is too short for unweighted that without any effect on her part they are noticed. In this respect, then, the removal of the restrictions would be of the very greatest advantage to American cattle raisers.

This the price of export cattle would have a strong tendency to increase the price of all the seeds of kindness and self-accrifice for others, and of unselfishness and the very greatest advantage to American cattle raisers.
