John K Bangs, in Harper's Young People. I've learned to dey two things quite new At least they're new to me; I think I'd better tell to you;

They may help you, you see, This is the first a pocket knife That opens and that shuts,

Is dangerous to human life,
Received it's sharp and oute. The second is, that fire not, That in the firmers burns, is rather upt to hart than not The boy who never learns of those cannot tail to arouse within them some sense of threatening danger.

I utter an accepted truth when I say that Canadians love their land. More than once has this love received practical expression. Were a foreign foe, greedy, rapacious and ornel to invade our shores, and seek to enslave the people of our Dominion there is not a true born Canadian but would come to his country's help and go gladly to the trout to fight for his home and his native land. The day when such invasion would be possible is, we

Of one of these fose I speak to-night, a foe that if he grine possession of our land, will not hesitate to carry on his work of destinction by every instrument of death that can be imagined; a foe that will have respect neither for the innocease of childhood, the gentleness of manbood nor the grey hairs of old age; a foe that will paralyze the arm, shatter the nerves, overthrow the reason, destroy the affections and blast the soul; a foe that will enter the shome and transform the dutiful son into a riotone profligate, the loving daughter into a channeless and namelees woman, the gentle mother into a heartless inchange the arm of the calministrator of an open foe, and not by the stug of

Of such a for I speak; did I say he

of ench a fee I speak; did I say he might come against our land? I was wrong, he has already come and the pisture I have drawn of his possible ravages is but a faint outline of the work he is yearly perpetrating in our fair land. By his guile this artful foe has insinuated himself into the confidence of our rulers, they are satisfied to let him stay so long as he pays for the privilege; as an American Bishop lately said "This foe, intemperance, is as wily as a serpent, slippery as an eel, couring as a fox, savage as a tiger, and blood thirsty as a hyena."

To the fight against such a foe, to the deliverance of our country from his clutches, I call you to-night. It is the work for staters if they would leave a heritage worth inheriting to their would preserve pure the sanctity of their homes, it is the work for mothers if they would preserve pure the sanctity of their homes, it is the work for young men and women in the viger of youth, if they with their freshness and strength would serve their generation.

however from the question of personal safety total abetinence becomes the boundend duty of every one who loves his fell pleasure to the mineralogist, den duty of every one who loves his fellowman. If you, my brother have not advanced beyond the stage where you sake the question, whether you cannot take your occasional glass of wine without personal danger or without actual sin, let me tell you you have not yet begun to learn the A, B, C of the gospel of Jesus Christ for if that gospel teaches anything it reaches saorifies for the rake of others. Especially should this be looked for on the part of those who hold any position of influence. Parents realize but little their responsibility, who set before their shildren an example which if followed may lead to ruin. That man I hold to be utterly unworthy of a position of public truet, who by his example would lead young men to tamper with intexicating The fo'lowing is the address delivered by the Rev. R. Where then is the fight with this aggressive foe to commence? With the individual. Total abstinence for the individual. Total abstinence for the individual is the first position to be assumed. At present the fishing industry is becoming a feilure, hence the people turn their attention to tarming, or what is still more deplorable the go to the United States. Last year on one steamer there were no less than thirty-two Cape Bretoners, who booked to Boston. This exedus depreciates everything, lowers the markets, injures farming and manufactures. But despite of all these adverse influences the Cepe Breton farmer is a good looking, stelwart, proud, and has an air of independence, equal to any of his brethren in the Dominion.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The action of the British Government, in declaring to endorse the efforts of the menagers of the endorse the efforts of the menagers of the approaching grand exposition at Jawaica to secure the perticipation of the government of the United States, has aroused great indignation at the state department and among those senators and representatives who have been informed of the facts in the case. Secretary Blains makes no concealment of his belief that the United States government was purposely snabbed by her majesty's representatives, and an investigation of the facts shows beyond dispute that the only reason why the United States will not be officially represented at the exposition is that no invitation was extended that could properly secreted. It has been alleged on the part of Great Briteis that as invitation was catended that as invitation was careful of the records of the state department has falles to bring to light any communication which scale he con-

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Reterring to the report that the British Government had not invited the United States to be represented at the Jamaica exposition, it was explained semi officially to-day that the British Government never sends formal invitations to any country to be represented at any exposition unless such exposition is actually organized by the British Government. A notice simply announcing that the Jamaics exposition was to be held was sent to the United States and other governments.
