A Good Verdict.

THE GREAT VICTORIA FALLS. Much Higher Than Niagara, and Nearly at Great a Volume of Water. When we come to the Victoria Falls on When we come to the Victoria Falls on the Zambesi, we arrive at one of the most remarkable sights which any river in the world has to show. The broad Zambesi moving nearly due south and 1,900 yards mide, is cleft by a chasm—a crack in its wide, is cleft by a chasm—a crack in its wide, is cleft by a chasm—crack in its wide, is cleft by a chasm—crack in its wide, is cleft by a chasm—a crack in its wide, is cleft by a chasm—a crack in its wide, is cleft by a chasm—a crack in its wide, is cleft by a chasm—a crack in its wide, is cleft by a chasm—a crack in its wide, is course. The whole chasm about 360 feet, or, counting the depth of the water, say 400 feet. The entire volume of water rolls clear over quite unbroken; but after a descent of 400 feet the glassy cascade becomes a seething, bubbling, boiling froth, from which spring upward high into the air immense columns of steam-like spray.

upward high into the air immediate of steam-like spray.

On the extreme edge, on the very lip of the chasm, there are four or five raised lumps of rock which have become islands densely covered with trees. To a certain extent they break the uniform descent of the whole breadth of the river. Beginning on the south bank, there is first a fall of thirty-six yards in breadth, and, of course, uniform in depth in breadth, and, of course, uniform in depth of descent to the rest of the river. Then Boaruka, a small island, intervenes, and there is only a thin veil of water descending over the rock in front of it.

Next comes a great fall with a breadth of 573 yards; a projecting rock separates this from a second great fall of 325 yards broad; farther east stands Garden Island; then comes a good deal of the bare rock of the river-bed uncovered by a descent of water, and beyond that a score of narrow falls, which at the time of flood constitute one enormous cascade of nearly half a mile in breadth. Those falls, however, which breadth. Those falls, however, which are between the islands are the finest, and there is little apparent difference in their volume at any period of the year.

Their vast body of water, separating into spurts of comet-like form, encloses in its descent, a large, volume of air, which its descent a large volume of air, which, forced into the cleft to an unknown depth, rebounds, and rushes up in a mass of vapor, and forms three to six columns of steam or smoke like. smoke-like appearance, visible twenty miles distant. On attaining a height of 200 or 300 feet above the islands, this vapor pecomes condensed into a perpetual shower of fine rain, which produces and sustains the most exuberant vegetation on the islands and on the neighboring shores. As might be imagined, the most beautiful rainbows of more than semi-circular extent play over the face of the falls. After the Zambesi has descended into this gulf, which is nearly twice the depth of Niagara, its wonder does not cease. Garden Island, almost in the center of the falls, divides the cascade in two main branches at the bottom of the gulf, which flow round a vapor hidden mass of rock, and reuniting in a boiling whirlpool, find an outlet nearly at right angles to the fissure of the falls. This outlet is nearer to the eastern end of the chasm than to its western extremity, and is no more than thirty yards wide. Within these narrow limits the Zambesi, which was over a mile wide when it plunged down over the falls, rushes and surges south through this extremely narrow channel for 130 yards, then abruptly turns and enters a second chasm somewhat deeper and nearly parallel with the first. Abandoning the bottom of the eastern half of this second chasm to the growth of the large trees, it turns sharply off to the west and forms a promontory of over 1,000 yards long by 400 yards broad at the base.

After reaching this base the river runs abruptly round the head of another promontory, and flows away to the east in a third chasm; then glides round the third promontory, much narrower than the rest, and away back to the west in a fourth chasm; and after that it still rounds another chasm; and after that it still rounds another promentory, and bends once more in another chasm toward the east, after which the extraordinary regards of this gigantic yet narrow trough become softened down into a wider, less abysmal gulf, which broadens and straightens as the river flows eastward in an easier descent.—H. H. Johnstone in African Explorations.

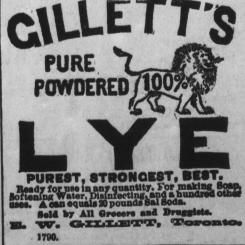

Our Disgraceful Roads.

In spite of the wonderful commercial and industrial progress of the United States, we are still to a large extent using the same soft, dusty, muddy country roads that served for our remote ancestors No organization has done more to remedy this surprising state of things than the League of American Wheelmen; and its secretary, Mr. Isaac B. Potter, of New York, has a word to say in the November Forum about the evil and its cure. He considers that the cost to the farmer of carting his produce over the "roughened streak of soil" that serves for a highway, is no small factor in the existing agricultural depression, and points out that the cost of maintaining public waggon roads, though great, is more than repaid to the community in the enhanced value of adjacent property alone.

This position he supports by statistics. It is to be hoped that Mr. Potter and his coworkers will succeed in rousing our rural communities to the disgrace of the condition of things which make us the laughing-stock of European travellers in this

Making It Plain,

The London Spectator tells a story of a clergyman who was once addressing an audience of children. "Now, children," he said, "I propose to give you on the present occasion an epitome of the life of St. Paul. Perhaps some of you are too young to understand what the word 'epitome' means. 'Epitome,' children, is in its signification synonymous with synopsis." Having made this simple and clear explanation to the children, the speaker went on with his
