thing was ready, I got in. The door was ocked a moment after I entered, and when I saw that there was no escape, I forced up a sickly sort of a grin and locked around. I was so scared that my legs shook under me, and the reporters were in exactly the same physical condition. The inventor puttered around fixing everything in shipshape, and we sat on the seat and trembled in

"Finally, everything was ready, and the inventor gave the word. The rope that held the car was cut, and the trip began. It is utterly impossible to describe the horrible sensation that I felt when that car shot downwards. My head swam, and black and red spots danced before my eyes. The swiftness with which it fell was incredible. It actually fell so fast that our bodies could not keep up with it, and we rose from the floor as if going in the opposite direction. I was faint and sick with fear. The inventor was faint and sick with fear. The inventor was calm, though very pale.

'The trip took but a few seconds, and sury foot that we fell the car seemed to increase its momentum. But by degrees its speed slackened, and finally it stopped at the bottom of the shaft, so slowly and easily that the water in a glass that sat on the floor of the car was not disturbed or rippled. We got out hurriedly, and the cushion was pronounced a success. Now, when I stempt to get in an elevator, that feeling of dread comes over me. Therefore I always walk."—Buffalo Express.

Good For Fits. For a fit of passion, walk out in the open air; you may speak your mind to the winds without hurting anyone or proclaiming yourself a simpleton.

For a fit of idleness, count the ticking of a clock; do this for one hour, and you will be glad to pull off your coat the next and work like a beaver.

For a fit of extravagance and folly, go the workhouse, or speak to the inmates of a gaol, and you will be convinced.

gaol, and you will be convinced.

For a fit of ambition, go to the church-yard and read the gravestones; they will tell you the end of ambition. The grave will soon be your bed-chamber, and the earth your pillow; corruption your father, and the worm your mother and sister.

For a fit of despondency look on the good things God has given you in this world, and to those he has promised to his followers in the next. He who goes into the garden to look for cobwebs and spiders no doubt will find them; while he who looks for a flower may return into his house with one bloom-may return into his house with one bloommay return into his house with one blooming in his bosom.

For all fits of doubt, perplexity, and fear, whether they concern the body or the mind, whether they are a load to the shoulders, the head or the heart, the following cure may be relied on, for I had it from the Great Physician: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

What Manning Knew About Barilla. Manning's logic was always fortified by that "readiness to assume omniscience" which is so useful in the ecclesiastical carer, and by a gracious Providence so lavish-ly bestowed. There was once a debate in Parliament about the "barilla duty"; and, as the term was little known, an admirer of Manning went to him for an explanation.
"Dear me," replied Manning, "not know what barilla means? I will explain it. what barilla means? I will explain it. You see, in commerce, there are two methods of proceedings. At one time you load your ship with a particular commodity, such as tea, wine, or tobacco; at another time you select a variety of articles suitable to the port of destination. And in the language of trade we describe this latter operation as a barilla."

Manning did not speak the language of operation as a barilla."

Manning did not speak the language of trade, because he was assuming more knowledge than he possessed; but for that reason he already spoke the language of papal histories and catechisms. The enquirer about "barilla" soon found out that it meant an alkali obtained from the ashes of a Spanish vegetable. "Splendide mendax" he may have thought when he learned the truth, "and his faith in Manning's infallibility was no longer the same."—The Academy.

When Widows Marry.

When a widow takes unto herself a twenty years old, she must have the cere-mony conducted on principles that corres-pond with the important fact that she is not a blushing bride who goes to the altar

The first time.

The maid of thirty can don pure white garments, hide her somewhat mature charms under a veil of tulle, be followed by a procession of young girls and have little boys for ushers if she so wills, but the widow of twenty must remember that she is a woman

No white gown or veil for her, no brides-maids and no ushers unless they be married

Yes, the verdict has gone forth and the second venture must be invested with a certain dignity. Therefore none but married people can form a part of the bridal party.

The bridesmaid must be matrons and the ashers and best men benedicts. Grey is the acarest approach to the snowy-white garments that a widow is permitted to wear, and a dainty bounet replaces the traditional veil. Fashion dictates and we obey.—Philadelphia Times.

Good Housekeepers Catch the Early Fly. The warm weather will soon be here, and some of the flies are already on hand. Of course, nebody will buy fly paper now or kill off the flies that are about to begin to kill off the flies that are about to begin to raise families. Prevention is rarely thought of in connection with insects or vermin. The first flies, the first roaches, and the first rais are always allowed to increase. We are a nation of bad housekeepers, and are not improving.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

platonic husband promised her in life. It was not proper to have too good health, either, or too much appetite, if she would be a really aristocratic young woman.—

In a dangerous emergency, AYER'S sure to cure. A dose taken on the first symptoms of Croup or Bronchitis, checks further progress of these complaints. It softens the phlegm, sooths the inflamed membrane, and induces sleep. As a remedy for colds, coughs, loss of roise la grippe, preumonia, and even voice, la grippe, pneumonia, and even consumption, in its early stages excels all similar preparations. It is endorsed by leading physicians, is agreeable to the taste, does not interfere with digestion, and needs to be taken usually in small doses.

"From repeated tests in my own family, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has proved itself a very efficient remedy for colds, coughs, and the various disorders of the throat and lungs."—A. W. Bartlett, Pittsfield, N. H. "For the last 25 years I have been taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for lung troubles, and am assured that its use has

Saved My Life

I have recommended it to hundreds. I find the most effective way of taking this medicine is in small and frequent doses."—T. M. Matthews, P. M., Sherman, Ohio. "My wife suffered from a cold; nothing helped her but Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which effected a cure."—R. Amero, Plympton. N. S.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell Mass. Prompt to act, sure to cure

The Social Education of Girls in France, Their minds were shielded by their parents and their triends, and the latter were careful in their presence. A word was sufficient to make them pass quickly over a dangerous subject. "Do not forget that there are some young girls here"—and the story would be stopped short. Everything, as I say, was done to keep the thoughts of young girls on poetic, gay and juvenile subjects. Facts about nature and science were only revealed to them when they had to be initiated into certain mysteries of life. A young woman who studied botany became a curiosity the moment when she pronoune-ed certain words. Ornithology was the most accepted science, because it was useful to mothers at the time of marriage for certain necessary revelations. The nests and the little birds gave a petic turn to talks that were necessary on the wedding day or the day before. But how many girls have been frightened and unnerved at these revelations, and how they would have fled to the far ends of the earth if they had dared, rather than contract a marriage, as Monsieur le Marie says! Our young women, whether of the higher or the lower nobility, of the peasantry, or the tradespeople, lived in a com-plete and ethereal ignorance. They did not know evil. It is quite true that they were not armed to guard or defend themselves, and they were often thrown into marriage unprepared, because of scruples and hesitations only too common on the part of mothers, who have not the slightest suspicions of the consequences; and they are as often indignant and disgusted by the exigencies. On the other hand, a young girl who opposes her family in a reasonable marriage with no other pretext than that the aspirant did not please her was unanimously censured. "Mademoiselle wishes to choose, herself, to marry, herself," they would repeat with severity. How could such a thing be permitted! "Do not her parents know better than she what will suit her? She is a girl who will come to no good." Then, a young girl never read any papers but fashion papers. Her educational books were examined, carefully coked over and expurgated. Even her were classic; they must have been ideal in the extreme, and nothing material could have been imagined by her, nothing but a platonic husband promised her in life. It
