The Editor Le Canadien.

In complying with your request to give reasons why separate schools should not be recognized in Manitobe and the North-West by the Dominion Government, permit me at the outset, to thank you most cordially for courtesy and kindness in publishing my fermer letter, and for the very gentlemanly and able the Gallican church is constant its constant is constant in the constant of the constant is constant in the constant of the constant is constant in the constant is constant in the constant is constant in the constant in the constant is constant in the constant in the constant is constant in the constant in th criticism you accorded it. In your reply there is reference to a couple of articles in THE VICTORIA WARDER of some years ago; but you are certainly very far astray in stating, "les catholiques sout traites un peu plus mal que des chiens dans ces citations, representees comme venant du Victoria Warder." In all my writings allow me te say I have never condemned the roman catholic instical authority, lay or clerical. In endeavoring to comply with your request, and my promise in response thereto, to "vous eclairer" re separate schools, it is my desire not to be misunderstood. The facts and arguments here adduced are presented as historical; and the conclusions are my own. Therefore, kindly hold me responsible for their faults and

To answer your question, which you state no English speaking journalist has yet done, why liberty of separate schools and the French language are denied your fellow countrymen, I presume you mean French-Canadians in general, in Manitoba and the North-West.

My answers are :—

1. There seems nothing in common between the French people on the one hand, and the roman catholic church on the other. Have not the French people ever been what their name frank, or free implies? i.e. synonymous with liberty, equality, progress? And does not the roman catholic church boast of its power, its sovereignty over the people and its adherence to ancient doctrines? Does history reveal aught that should cause cohesion between the French race and the roman catholic church? Old Gaul was Celtic. For several centuries before Christ and for at least two thereafter Greek flourished in the colonies and cities in the south and central parts of France. But during the third fourth and fifth centuries the Gallic legions, schools and laws of the Western Roman Empire made "popular Latin," (Lingua romans rustica) the dominant language. During the four centuries succeeding the downfall of the Western Roman Empire of which Gaul was a chief part, the popular tongue developed into "Old French," a language which to day

few even of the learned journalists of Quebec can read without a glossary. Even yet each corner of France has its own peculiar dialect, reflecting the early influences operating to create modern French. The popular language was early brought under Teutonic and Scandinavian influences in the successive settlements of Goths, Burgundians, Franks and or the purchase of the stock in trade and book debts of the above insolvents as follows: Stock and Fixtures, $793.97; Book Debts, $459.92. Norsemen, while later the English exercised | valleys or amid the Alpine mountains; but

Nor are the French people akin to those of Rome. As previously stated the early settlers were Celts or Gaels; then colonies of sufficient extent each to exercise dominant influence for a time, were planted by Greece, the Goths, Burgundians, Franks, Norsemen, and English, From the Franks, i.e. freemen, the country took its name. There were never any large Reman settlements in France, the legions being almost entirely Teutonic or Gothic soldiers from the East.

Remote as is every connection between the peoples of France and of Rome the gulf between the French or Gallican and the roman catholic churches is even wider. Old Gaul had for church—"druidism." The druids recognized one Supreme Being, the immortality of the soul, and future rewards and punish-

France; and before the close of the first century the Gallican church was a living reality, sending missionaries from France, bearing the simple gospol of the Bretherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God, to Ireland, England, Scotland, Wales and Spain. History records that the first missionaries were Greek immigrants from Asia Miner, the first of whom had probably seen the Apostle to the Gentiles. The earliest christian community was founded at Lyons. There and at Vienne, an Asiatic Greek named Pothinus, a disciple of Poiycarp who was contemperaty with the Apostles, proclaimed the simple story. The Greek origin of this first Gallican church is confirmed by the famous letter of the martyrs of Lyons and Vienne which was written in the Greek tongue, and was addressed not to Rome or to Romans, but to Greeks and ran as follows:

"The servants of Jesus Christ dwelling at Vienne and Lyons in Gaul to the brethren of Asia and Phrygia having the same fath and here with no." The first father of Ganl was appreciated the restriction of the matter of the martyre of Lyons and Phrygia having the same fath and here with no." The first father of Ganl was addressed not to the brethren of Ganl was and protestant, and will therefore not tolerate and protestant, and will therefore not tolerate appreciation of the spirit and practice of "Imperial" as well as "Spiritual Rome" in enforcing through the strength of armies their language, laws and church worship on the people are exemplified to-day in the policy of a section of the roman cathelic church to enforce through separate schools and divergent languages their rered on the nation. In French settlements the church policy seems to be to perpetuate the French language; in German, the German; in Celtic, the Gaelic; etc. But the spirit of progression of Canadians one grand nationality.

Great Britain has never pursued the policy of Rome in enforcing any language or church worship on her colonies. Our roman eatholic church to enforce and interest the policy of Rome in enforcing any lang Vienne and Lyons in Gaul to the brethren of Asia and Phrygia having the same fatth and hope with us." The first father of Gaul was Irenesus anether Greek and also a pupil of Polycarp. In the famous discussion regarding the observance of Easter, while Irenesus held nearly the same views as did the Roman held nearly the same views as did the Roman abuse his properties in the Roman abuse his properties in Western Engages. bishops, yet he energetically counselled the Eastern bishops to maintain their independent views as he maintained his. Thus arose and flourished the genuine Gallican church in were educated to write and read long before Gaul, independent in every respect eyen to the appeintment by the people of the clergy.

But, though oppressed by the greater apparent power and spiendor of the church of Rome,

Again and again it asserted itself under the forms Gallican, Albigensian, Paulician, Manichean, Catharist, Waldensian, Huguenot, and other names. All these denominations were Frenchmen struggling heroically for the honor of their country and the glory of their God.
You are doubtless familiar with the history of these struggles. The siege of Bezieres illus-irates them. The Albigenses a heroic people, occupying all central southern France, had people; on the contrary I have ever spoken kindly of them as a class of citizens; but I rankly admit objecting to the direction and management of any people be they protestant, independent or roman catholic, by any ecolestic and their own way, in church forms and belief not unlike modern thought. The papal powers made war and finally hemmed in the faithful Frenchmen and their families in Beziers. Just Frenchmen and their families in Beziers. Just as the city after a long siege was about to be stormed, the papal general with the heart of a soldier not of a churchman, and wishing to obviate a general massacre consulted the church dignitary directing proceedings. In reply to the general's appeal that there might be some (Capt. McLean, was held on the grounds in the roman catholics among the Albigenses and Gallicans, and how could they be distinguished in a general massacre, the answer was "Kill them all, God Almighty will know his own." The triple tyrant; that from there may grow A hundred fold, who having learned the Early may fly the Babylonian woe." Those were French heroes, brave defenders of the old primitive Gallican faith, Waldenses being cruelly massacred by the mandate of "spiritual Rome." In defence of those same Frenchmen Oliver Cromwell issued to the pope of Rome his famous order:—"Unless the persecution and massacre of the brave French Waldenses at once cease, English cannon shall be heard and English soldiers seen, not in the Vaudois in the streets of Rome and under the walls of St. Angelo." And the persecution "at once" ceased. colonized America. The thousands of fearess men, wemen and children who wished to found homes for themselves and to lay the foundation of a free French nation in America were Frenchmen. The Huguenot or Gallican colonies from Florida to Nova Scotia were all French. That intrepid officer Samuel de Champlain was himself a Huguenot until just prior to his death when he nominally adopted the church worship practised by the court of France.

Indeed it is safe to say that but for the roman catholic church the entire centinent of North America to-day from the sthmus of Panama to the Arctic Circle would of the soul, and future rewards and punishments. They had one great advantage over modern churches, their temples were the open groves and valleys, thus taxes for church building were light.

Soon after the death of Christ, Greek missionaries following trading vessels told the Gospel story in its beauty and simplicity throughout all the Greek colonies in Gaul or France; and before the close of the first central transfer of the Gallicen church was a living reality.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does, it is indeed wenderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle rare, that they may try it before purchasing. The Large Bottles are 50c and $1.00. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.—12-ly.

special to The Warder. WE ARE much pleased to have amongst us again the Rev. Rural Dean Westney and his estimable wife and family. They have become sunbeams among us whose annual appearance we look forward to with pleasure. They are guests at the Queen's Hotel which is fast becoming a popular summer resort, under the excellent management of its new proprietor, Mr. D. McCrea. Mr. McCrea is a young, fine looking man, and, by the way, is looking for a suitable wife. He is proving himself worthy of one by his enterprising and business ability. This place is yearly becoming better known and patronized by pleasure seekers and now that the accommodation is ample, the house new, clean and bright, there is no reason why Coboconk should not be a grand success, and more especially when we get that swing bridge in at Fenelon Falls. Then excursions weekly to Lindsay will be the rule.

Mr. Harvey has lately purchased the flour mills here and completed a contract to have them converted into first class roller mills The eld machinery is all being removed and the foundation rebuilt. A new plant of the latest improved roller mills, warranted to do work second to none is being put in. The mills will be ready for work in the course of six weeks, and the proprietor hopes to be patronised according to the merits of his work and dealing. Mr. Harvey is also busy erecting a grain ware house at the station which will be ready for use in time for the new crop, when he hopes to establish a good market for all farm produce. This has been a long felt want in this place and we hope the enterprise will meet with success.

NORLAND.

Special to The Warder. Mr. D. Brokenshire and family have moved to Newcastle; where Mr. Brokenshire has secured a good position. From a social standpoint they will be greatly missed, as during their residence here they were social favorites with old and young. Mrs. Brokenshire will be especially missed in church work, as her willing hands were at every opportunity engaged in some good work; and in our choir no more is heard her sweet familiar voice. The best wishes of the entire community follow Mr. and Mrs. Brokenshire with their little family to their new home.
