Mother.

I'was autumn when our mother dear

In pain and sickness lied, When leaves and garlands wither near

First eve she slept as in healthful ease

Did speak in accents strong. God's voice it was "No Cure," it said

For nine long weeks mid pangs of pain

When the dark is spreading o'er.

Our loving one must go,
For the pallid cheek, and fading eye
And trembling lip of snow,
Are signets from the hand of death

When unseen angels come
To bear the loving and soothing ones
To their own dear happy home.

After a'pause, a renewal of strength

As well watched her breathing low and free
Words of comfort she did recite,
The song of David, Psalm twenty-three
Filled her soul with love and pure delight.

To Paul's last words she had given vent,

As each was clasped in mother's embrace

To partake of her parting address,
On each head, her loving hand did place
And prayed with God each one to bless.

That in heaven we all should meet,

When our voices then with one accord

She always watched for the morning dawn,

Each other we all shall greet.

Her quiet eye-lids closed -she had

The sympathy that she did impart,
The scoothing words of love,
Shall never more make glad the heart

Around the parent's home. On mother dear, our last look was done,

But let our burning thoughts go forth

Our missing one, when worlds shall bow
Before the judgment seat.
And pray that when, the wings of death
Is shadowed on our brow,

How to Save Your Money.

As her days grew few, we firmly thought

In accents firm and clear; It told her that her life was brief

And then a voice with God's own peace

And weeping winds had sighed.

The conqueror of life had come, And laid his chilling death cold hand,
