Miss Phelps' Lecture.

On Tuesday, March 7th, according to an nouncement, Miss Phelps delivered a lecture under the auspices of the W C T U The chair was taken at 8 o'clock by Mrs. Campbell president of the local union. The merting was epeced by singing. The Rev. Mr. Campbell led in prayer and Mr. Cahoun read the 2ad chapter of Habakkuk. After singing another hymn Miss Phelps wa introduced to the audience.

The lecture was a direct attack upon the In lecture was a direct a tack upon the liquor traffic, and the listle lady handled her weepons with great skill. She began by telling the legendary story of St. George and the dragon, which comes down to us from the 4th century. She then a mpared the liquor traffic, the dragon of the present time with the dragon of the early ages.

England was the first country to grant a liquor license, which event dates back to the 5th year of the reign of Edeard VI. At the present time there are £180,000 spent annually for rum in Great Britain. One person in every ten goes to bed with ut his apper, and rises without any prespect of a breakfast. There are $18 per head apant in liquor.

The United States having a population of 60,000,000 spend $16 per head in strong drink. Last year 50,000 persons filled drunkards graves there.

Canada with a population of 6,000,000 spends $5.16 per head for drink.

Instead of legislation regulating the saloon, the saloon of to-day proceed to regulate legislation. legislation. She gave an flustration to that effect. In New York city where the Tammany ring is all powerful 3 bits have lately been presented to Congress, fr the jurpose of securing privileges which would enable men to desecrate the Sabbath day in a greater degree than ever before.

Mr. D. W. Shier, who is attending Trinity Miss Phelps believes the people of Canada could live nicely without the revenue which is derived from the liquor traffic. She has not be feared that he will not be well enough to heard of any serious results tollowing the loss face his primary examinations, beginning owing to the decrease of auty on sugar. The saloon can make drunkards far er than the church can recaim them. The 'o. iv proper way to settle the liquor question is by pronibition. Regulation laws bay tailed to give the desired results, and so has moral masion While the saloen exists there will be a demand for its wares If there was not the supply of liquor there would not be the appetite for it. This statement she proved by the fact that there was notiber an appetite nor a demand for tobacco till Sir Walter Raleigh discovered the plant and placed it on the Eoglish market. The supply creates the demand, and the demand creates prices.

There are two kinds of labor, productive and non-productive Productive labor adds value to the object upon which it is bestowed.

The saloon labor does not. When there hap pens to be a surplus of cotton or boots in the manufacturing establishments, men will say it is owing to ever production. Miss Phelps claims it is caused by under commumption. She says she is not a political economist; she is only a woman, still she is well aware of the fact that at the present time there are thou sands of feet in need of boots and shoes.

The purchasing capacity of the country is not equal to the supply because the money has been turned into the wrong channels. Whatever destroys a man's earning power also destroys his purchasing power. The saloon is destroys his purchasing power. The saloon is the enemy of every enterprise.

The saloon is the foe of society because it aims at destroying the citizen.

She says the Church has not taken the stand against the saloon that is within her power. She believes when the Christian Church says go to the saloon, it must go and will remain gone. She then quoted the words of the late Sir John A McDonald. Some years ago a large deputation of liquor sellers of Oatario waited upon him asking for certain privileges. During the interview some hard things were spoken against the churches.
"Stop gentlemen," said Sir John, "don't fight the churches; as soon as the churches do their duty your days are numbered."

Some men say we cannot stop the saloon, but we should try and make it as respectable as possible. The more respectable the salcon is the more dangerous it is. She then reviewed Rev. Dr. Raineford's plan for elevating the saloon, which from a temperance point of view was nothing but a force. As there can be no efficiation between heaven and hell, meither can there be affiliation between the Church and the saloon. The result of Dr. Rainsferd's ettempt to remodel the saloon, was that very soon he was made honorary member of a large distilling company in the United States, and all over the land saloons are being named after him. She argues that it is harder to convict a rumseller than it would be to hang a man. It is possible to hang a man for murder on circumstantial evidence, but no person ever heard of a rumseller being convicted on circum-

She pointed out the progress made by the temperance cause during the past ten years, and referred to the direct Veto bill, which was lately introduced to the British Parliament by the Hon. W. E. Gladstone.

She concluded her address by strongly expressing her faith in the ultimate victory of the cause. The lecture was an exceedingly good one, and was highly appreciated by the audience. The Rev. Mr. Campbell made a few very appropriate closing remarks, after which a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Phelpa.—Com.

The taxes collected are for municipal purposes, county ecuncil, township im provemente, roade, schools, etc., and to pay officials appointed by Mr. Mowat at large salaries in the county town and throughout the sounty. He appoints them and the tax payer has to pay them. The Mowat government also takes several thousands of dollars a year from us in licenses and fines-amounts that we formerly had for the improvements of our roads, etc. This is where the money goes that you pay in your yearly taxes. WAR RUMORS AND FIGURES.

The continued increase of the war runor

in Europe gives room for the consideration of a few facts and figures. Although the North German Gazette declares that "in the judgment of high official circles there is no cause for alarm, at least for the present," concentration of troops in Alsace and Lorraine is daily reported, and appeals in all shapes and forms pointing out the dan-gers which threaten the Fatherland and the necessity for the passage of the new army bill, are found in German journals, pamphlets, and reviews, and often signed by men of high standing in empire. One of these appeals comes from Gen. Von der Goltz, a well-known writer on military affairs. In the Deutscho Rundschau he says that France. with her thirty-eight millions of inhabitants against Germany's forty-nine millions, possesses in men, officers, artillery, and horses an army considerably stronger than that of Germany. Every year under the new military laws she has been adding 42,000 men to that army, and in a very short time she will be able to put into the field half a million of trained soldiers more than Germany can boast of to-day. He takes a rather gloomy view of the future of his country, dwelling upon the fact that the French army in 1889 was exactly five times as strong as her army of 1870, and that it must soon become seven times as strong. In addition to the increase of the forces n Alsace-Lorraine, we are told that Mayence is to be converted into an entrenched camp. The Mayence-Strasburg line of fortifications is to be extended toward Bale, with the view of covering the numerous railway bridges across the Rhine. These bridges were built expressly for the purpose of facilitating the rapid transport of troops from southern Germany into Upper Alsace. Moreover, Mayence torms the principal basis of supplies for the German armies on the left of toe Rhine, and, not withstanding its enormous strenghth, it is now decided to make it still stronger, in view of the extraordinary growth of the French forces.

According to the most careful estimates so far made, Russia on the outbreak of hostilieies could put in line 25 army corps. which, added to the French forces, make all told 47 army corps. The army corps of the Triple Alliance are as follows : Germany, 20; Austria, 13; Italy, 10; total, 43. Consequently France and Russia have four army corps more than the Triple Alliance. Even under the new military law and the application of the two years' service in allits force, the Tripple Alliance would still be numerically inferior to France and Russia. To be sure, it may be that the German troops, and the German Generals and officers are vastly superior to the French and the Russians; but nobody can say that for a certainty, and Gen. Von der Goltz expresses grave doubts upon the subject. Unfortunately the thing remains to be tested. present military situation of Europe is that in the case of war this spring or summer and the possibility of it seems by no means remote-the bulk of the forty-seven French and Russian army corps could be huiled against the German corps, and the first and most terrific blows of the contest squarely delivered before the Italians and Austrians could come to the assistance of their principal ally. Indeed, the first great shocks of the war might be decisive; and, should the Germans be defeated in the beginning, it is feared that the Italians and the Austrians might, after all, he disposed to leave her in the lurch. However, if the Germans troops should be fortunate enough to be commanded by a great General and the French and Russians sufficiently unlucky to be without one, the advantage of numerical superiority would be considerably diminished.

Changeable Roses of the Orient. The Chinese, the Japanese, and the Siamese know a thing or two about botany and floriculture that would be of much value to the German, English, and American botanists. One of their achievements -the one on which they pride themselves above all others, unless it is the art of raising oaks in thimbies-is the "changeable rose," a real rose in everything except that it is white when in the shade and blood-red as soon as the sumight strikes it. The words "as soon" in the last sentence above do not literally mean instantaneously, but one thing is sure, the transformation is rapid enough for the wondering eyes that are allowed the rare pleasure of beholding such a wonderful sight. After night, or when in a dark room, this curiosity of the rose family is a pure. waxy white blossom. When transferred to open air the transformation immediately sets in, the time of the entire change of the flower from white to the most sanguine of all sanguine hues de-pending on the degree of sunlight and warmth. First the petals take on a kind of washed or faded bine color, which rapidy changes to a very faint blush of pink. The pink gradually deepens in hue until you find that your lily-white rose of an hour before is as red as the reddest peopy that ever bloomed.

Ages of Presidents. The average age of Presidents of the United States upon taking office is 56 years. Mr. Cleveland will be nearly 56 when he inaugurated next month. General Grant, the youngest President, was only 47 when he began his first term, and Mr. Cleveland was 48.
