What an expert he is in his own imagination. It certainly casts a reflection on their professional knowledge; He says he can safely substantiate Broad's diagnosis and treatment. I believed after that he could substantiate anything where there is a motive involved. It is not the first time I heard him make an ignoramus of himself. Does he not remember how the students used to laugh and jeer him for his silly remarks? I could repeat some of them but they are so ridiculous I would not waste time and paper in repeating them. As to Broad's statement about being called back to attend the case is easily explained without seeking to enlighten the public. I believe Dr. Naysmith's agreeing to allow him to come back was by agreement: If Williams would agree with him, and did he not tell him to not give any more medicine to the horse; and if agree with him, and did he not tell him to not give any more medicine to the horse; and if he took sick again before 2 o'clock p.m., Sunday, the 4th, he would send for another vet. and have no more trouble with him. And partly through the intervention of an unscrupulous groom, whose notoriety for meanness and double dealing has become a by-word.

The English people have during late generations had particular reason to be pleased with and proud of their royal family. Queen Victoria is the first really Constitutional Sovereign who ever reigned in England. If this should seem to any one a somewhat startling assertion he has only to think the matter over for a few minutes and he will find that it is an absolute fact in our history. William IV, had to be dragged into the acceptance of constitutional principles. George IV. had to be dragged nor driven. Queen Vidtoria seems to be a born Constitutional Sovereign,—London England Daily News.

Wanderings,

COMPLAINTS are made about a certain house or stack, situated not many miles frem Corsons' Siding, it has been one of evil repute and of a low degrading character, and of which we hear of as sometimes classed in large cities, we believe, as bucket shops. We would since rely ask the corporation of Bexlev on behalf of the God-fearing and law-abiding subjects of this township to remedy this nuisance and also reprimand the upholders of all such low, degrading nature, or I am sure we shall have to apply the last remedy, namely, tar and feathers. Respectable farmers' wives left at home while their husbands are busy at work are in danger of being insulted in their own respectful homes by such drunken brutes of men.
