AUGHT HIM ON A CAB.

It was an abominably wet day. You know what that means in London—cab drivers' millennium, little mud pie makers' Elysian fields, despair and petticoat ruin to fair pedestrians! Mrs. Lancaster stood under the shelter of a fashionable modiste's door, looked forward and groaned. No hansom in sight; ruin to her clothes stared her in the face if she sallied out; ruin to her purse whispered to her behind should she enter the shop again.

"The dispensation of gain is not in Providence diocese," was her irreverent summing up. "He'd make it rain at the proper times or on No Man's Land if it were. Oh, dealing is the murmured under her breath, rashly guaranteeing the beast's peaceful nature, "and you shall have sixpence,"

Thus having reduced the legion of unemployed by one, she turned and rang the bell. times or on No Man's Land if it were. darling!" she murmured under her breath, for a hansom bore in sight, looming. Whisterishly, hazily wet. A slashing, golden bay between the shafts and a civil jehu perched up behind.

out went her umbrella and she tucked up her frills. She signalled; he drew up and she dashed out. The man, careful fellow, had closed the doors and let down the window. An agonized endeavor to open door, balance umbrella, rescue skirts from mud, and save new bonnet ensued. and save new bonnet ensued. He saw that, and with unusual, uncabbylike courtesy, umped down, saying :
"Allow me."

The lady gave a little scream. "Tom ! you driving a hansom ?"

"No worse than driving my coach, is it, Mrs. Lancaster?" he retorted. "Oh! Tom, dear, what on earth are you doing it for?" Then, with a high-handed attempt at dignity: Might I ask the reason for this new and extraordinary metier? Is it for a bet ?" "A bet? Oh, dear no!" A distinct pause. "A bet? Oh, dear no!" A distinct pause.

"That bonnet of yours is getting rather the worst of it; it's a pity, for it's rather a nice one," he added, eying it critically, as one who knows the ways and means of bonnets, or rather the ways of the bonnets, and the means of those who can afford such a one as he saw before him. he eved it critically, though not feeling he eyed it critically, though not feeling nearly so cool as he was anxious to make

"Oh, dear, no! When a man's poor and has to earn his living by the sweat of his brow he is likely to find the latter more plentiful than the former; so I am only too glad to get what fares I can." He gloated wickedly, for she looked up in his face while a mist gathered and grew in his eyes, and the hansom. She settled herself in a corner of the cab with another sigh and a furtive glance at the looking-glass to her left, while the driver mounted behind and slowly gathered up the reins. He banged down the window and slapped open the little trapdoor overhead with professional noise, and then "Where to?" with professional brevity.

"Home, please, if you don't mind," said his fare, meekly. As they drove down Bond street, Mrs. Lancaster's eyes being shut off from out-ward sights, she turned them inward and viewed her whirling thoughts.

"What a story this would make if anyone only knew, or if I only had the pen of a ready writer. It's really quite a pity that my gift all runs to seed in correspondence.

Down went the skylight. The great stagnation slowly uprose and they drove on again. It had begun to clear up. Mrs. Lancaster thought she knew her way about town, but Mr. Lancaster should have known it still better, and yet he took her round Crosvapor place as a means to reaching

She had money of her own, a good £1,500 a year, and when the final split came—a split born of a very small rift—he had been too proud to let her know how his money matters stood, and so it came about that husband and wife had not met for quite a year, and that during the last five weeks he had driven a raking bay about London, harnessed to a luxurious "St. T." hansom.

And he? Well, he was thinking of what a thundering ass he had been and how he had tried her love and faith in him.

And she? Well, had she too, not flirted just a bit with Lord Racque and Colonel Targent, and when he had remonstrated ever so little had she not flared out on him and thrust that odious, yellow-haired Signora Sorella in his face?

"I wish he wouldn't drive quite so fast," she thought. "We shall get home so soon if he does."

It was no such thing, for in two the was out again, the wine untouc

"You must have got so wet and cold I wish you—would you?" she stammered, timidly—"would you mind just taking a little—to—to please me?"

She had taken off her glove, and the broad wedding band caught his eye. A spasm of pain came upon his face. It was like driving your fist through a mirror and smashing the smooth, even surface into

"I have forgotten nothing," he answered gravely.

"Not even the way to your dressing-room," she said archly, turning around.

"Well, your real fare is two shillings, but I will give you a 'golden crown.'"

She raised her face, as she spoke. No seed to explain the meaning of the words o one who loved her as did this strange abman. He took the "golden crown" beween both his hands and kissed her fair crobed tended.

"Thank you," he said, a little unsteadily, in a rather husky voice, as he descended slowly from his perch.

About a quarter of an hour later the hansom drew up in Norfolk street.

Mrs. Lancaster got out and walked slowly up the steps. Before ringing she turned around. A little ragamuffin was inspecting her.
"Would you like a sixpence?" she asked him gravely. A superfluous question, to which he replied, with the knowledge of past experience to guide him, and a wisdom beyond his winters:
