THE "CONGO HERALD," AFRICA, SAYS.—
A herd of elephants broke into Cassius Pajamas potato patch, Wedtreaday night. Cassius thought he heard a noise, about the middle of the night, but never suspected elephants,
Mr. Pajama's potatoes were tramped so far into the ground that he will have to dig them out with a shovel and pick ax. He wondered why his yellow dog didn't bark. Next merning he found what seemed to be a yellow rug, lying in the garden. It was the dog, and he was as flat as a piece of gold plate, and as thim
as a wafer. The elephant had stepped on him. That was the reason he didn't bark.

OAKWOOD-To the Editor of THE WARDER -Mr. Editor: I see by the Lindsay papers that the Rev. Robert Johnston is to give a that the Rev. Robert Johnston is to give a lecture, in the Academy of Music, on the World's Fair, assisted by Mr. Stevens B. A. of the Collegiate Institute. A few days ago at Manilla I had the pleasure of seeing the views and hearing Mr. Stevens lecture on the "White City." Lindsay people have a treat in store for them, for Friday Dec. 15th. Many from here, will no doubt drive in te "hear and see." It is to be hoped Lindsay has a hall large enough to hold the people, FROM ONE WHO HAS BEEN THERE. FROM ONE WHO HAS BEEN THERE.

ONE ADVANTAGE IN BEING TALL.—Bev. B.

Druggist,—1900-ly.

One advantage in being tall.—Rev. R.
Johnston of Lindsay had a great advantage at the World's Fair over ordinary mortals. In the first place he is so terribly tall that it made no difference whether or not he were in a crowd; he could see anywhere. Then, he always has his eyes open when anything is to be seen. Again, his tastes run in right lines, so he saw what was worth seeing. The "tough" side shows, and "midway plateance" freaks had little charm for him. The faculty of knowing what is interesting, elevating and had little charm for him. The faculty of knowing what is interesting, elevating and instructive for the general public also belongs to that worthy elergyman. On Friday evening, December 15th, in the Academy of Music, Lindaay, therefore, Rev. Mr. Johnston will deliver a lecture on the World's Fair and will be assisted by W. H. Stevens, B.A., of the collegiate institute, with stereopticon views. The whole entertainment will prove highly interesting and instructive.

A PRACTICAL JOKE.—A female minstrel company invaded Lindsay, about a month ago and of course had a full house. Among the jokelets was one of the "practical" sort, in consequence of which a good many occupied front seats, and some who didn't, are reported "all broken up." One of the beauties connected with the show served costume, where she demanded admittance. The doorkeeper stopped her, whereat she screamed: "Let me in! My husband's in there and I,m going to take him out!" Instantly several hundred men —some bald and some not—began trying to get under the seats, while one made a dash out of the window and escaped in the darkness.
