WRONGLY ARRESTED.—An incident occurred in town last Saturday and Sunday that should be taken advantage of by some enterprising merchant—i. e. in having printed labels to address and paste on parcels for the convenience of out of town customers who have their goods left at hotels or elsewhere. In the meantime a gentleman put a parcel on the table where the young lady's parcel had been. The hour came to go home, and the young lady, not knowing her father's doirgs, took the parcel—which was similar in size to her own and from the same store—and drows home some nineteen which was similiar in size to her own and from the same store—and drove home some nineteen miles. The gentleman missed his parcel, found who took it, and had a warrant issued for her arrest. Chief of police Short arrived here with her Sunday afternoon. Monday her trial took place, when everything was made clear, and the poor girl after suffering the shame of being arrested, was permitted to go. A neatly printed and addressed label would have saved all the trouble.
