Provincial Prohibition Jurisdiction.

SOME IMPORTANT FACTS REGARDING THE CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION. Mr. E. Saunders, one of the counsel employed by the liquor interests to argue before the Supreme Court, has just contributed an interesting paper to the Advocate (liquor organ), which contains points of general interest, and we therefore reproduce parts of it in the Home Guard.

Mr. Marter and some other leading members of the opposition, though claiming to be themselves prohibitionists, have been suggesting the people from some public platforms that Mr. Mowat well know that the courts will decide that the Provincial Legislature has no authority to enact a prohibition law, and therefore he has been merely humbugging the temperance people in assuring them what he will do in case the courts decide in favor of his contention.

Mr. Saunders here very clearly states the case, as it will, no doubt, be presented at the Supreme Court on the 1st of May: "On the one side it is contended that the jurisdiction belongs to the Dominion Parliament by virtue of its being a branch of the Dominion Parliament, and the regulation of trade and commerce, the regulation of which, as before stated, belongs to the Dominion. It has at length been definitely settled that the provinces have the right to enact such legislation, and for years past the brewers of the provinces have taken out a provincial license under the act."

It will be observed that upon this, as well as upon many other constitutional questions, the provinces have maintained their views with much persistence, and it must be confessed, with a good deal of success. In 1878 the Canada Temperance Act (commonly called the Scott Act) was passed by parliament. A year or two afterwards the question of its constitutionality came before the Supreme Court, when it was held to be valid, and in the case of Russell vs. The Queen its validity was affirmed by the Privy Council. This result, at least in part, to the contention arrived at by some able lawyers, that the Dominion parliament also possessed the licensing power, and in 1883 the Canada License Act (commonly called the McCarthy Act) was passed. This in turn came before both the Supreme Court and Privy Council, both tribunals holding it to be ultra vires. The judgments, however, were not entirely in accord; the Supreme Court made a distinction between those provisions which authorized the issue of wholesale and vessel licenses and the balance of the act. The last named court held that the right to issue wholesale and vessel licenses belonged to the Dominion, while the Privy Council decided that the act was wholly void.

The Mysteries of a Pack of Cards.

A private soldier by the name of Richard Lee was taken before a magistrate recently for playing cards during divine service at St. John's church, and when the parson had read the prayers he took the text. Those who had a Bible took it out, but this soldier had neither Bible nor common prayer book, but pulling out a pack of cards, he spread them before him. He just looked at one card, and then at another. The sergeant of the company saw him, and said: "Richard, put up the cards; this is no place for them."

When the service was over the constable took Richard before the mayor, "what have you brought the soldier here for?" "For playing cards in church."

"Well, soldier, what have you to say for yourself?" "Very good, if not, I will punish you more than heaven can punish."

And, spreading the cards before the mayor, he began with the ace: "When I see the ace, it reminds me there is but one God. When I see the deuce, it reminds me of Father and Son. When I see the tray, it reminds me of Father, Son and Holy Ghost. When I see the four spot, it reminds me of the four evangelists that preached, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. When I meet the five, it reminds me of the five virgins that trimmed their lamps—there were ten, but five were wise and five were foolish and were cast out. When I see the six, it reminds me that in six days God made heaven and earth. When I see the seven, it reminds me that on the seventh day He rested from the great work He had created and hallowed it. When I see the eight it reminds me of the eight righteous persons that were saved when God destroyed the world, viz: Noah and his wife with three sons, King of heaven, which is God Almighty. When I see the queen, I am reminded of the Queen of Sheba, for she was as wise a woman as Solomon was a man. She brought with her fifty boys and fifty girls, all dressed in boys' apparel, for King Solomon to tell which were boys and which were girls. King Solomon sent for water for them to wash; the girls washed to their elbows and the boys to the wrists so King Solomon told by that."

"Well," said the mayor, "you have given a good description of all the cards except one."
