LINDSAY LIBERAL CONSERVATIVE

The liberal conservative party leaders in the town of Lindsay need to be harsh, but the gentlemen of this town engineering the party are altogether too easygoing; and much of the little energy and genius evolved is very badly direct-

A few of the essential elements necessary to that organization are judgment, running an election, back-bone and Meredith and his friends. There has left to depend on a button-hole canvass; the grand assues for which Mr. Mereditl so ably fought were not presented to the people until the last two weeks; there was a cringing after creed and sectarian ism, and when a meeting would by chance be held there were always enough speakers present for three or four.

In our own case, offers of assistance by way or meetings, organizing and present-ing Mr. Meredith's platform were made months ago; but the directors in Lindsay advised other policy. The "quiet canvais" seemed to commend itself to the leaders in town, but not to the great bulk of the

To our mind, having a policy anyone should be proud of, the proper plan was to have educated the people in those views; and we finally decided to pursue the plans that most commended them-

It is to be regretted that the majority of our roman catholic fellow citizens should act as they alway do. Every election many of them profess to be inclined to support the conservative candidate and build his hopes high. Then s week or two before polling day this or that objection crops up, and the vote is denied. The conservative canvassers meantime have had the pleasure of going about whispering, "I'm going to get a good roman catholic support this time." "A lot of my old friends among them are going to stick to me and I know others are going to vote for me." Then some days before polling the conservative canvassers look long faced. Inquiry reveals that one of the many standard stock in trade "excuses" looms up to prevent the promised support.

Bah! It makes one angry to see men act so. Some staunch roman catholics vote as they please and vote conservative; but ninety-five per cent of them vote solid for Mowat always, and no weak whi pering canvass is going to change them. The excuse this time was, first, Meredith's Toronto speech, and lastly Mrs. Shepherd's visit. But if it had not been those it would have been something

Mr. Bryans injured himself, too, by giving a certain grit roman catholic insurance agent a trip over the county with him. The man was known to have been a notorious grit, and no one had heard public proclamation of his change. Besides, the man has always been known as a rank churchman and his strange presence with the conservative candidate very properly created great indignation among the old and tried workers of the party. It resembled too much an attempt to win the roman catholic vote and seem ed like a pandering to creed.

The liberal conservative leaders in Lindsay should certainly remodel themselves and their modes of engineering a campaign. The campaigns of Dec. 1886, Feb. 1887, April 1887, Dec. 1890, and others in South Victoria were not run on the plans of the recent election. Either we are not in accord with the policy of the liberal conservative party in its model of conducting election campaigns or the leaders in Lindsay are far, very far, wide of the mark in their lines. It should be quietly inquired into and the faults whether in us or in them remedied.

EAST VICTORIA.

Up to the time of going to press, we have been unable to get full returns from the several polling places. The latest account is that Mr. Carnegie's majority is stirred up. It is not our desire to be 383, Fenelon Falls giving a majority of 38 to the representative of honest govern-

The Canadian protective association, usually termed the protestant protective carcely been a break in their ranks, They have stood for measures, not men.

The patrons of industry leaders on the contrary have played a most disreputable game. They have in every single instance leaders in Lindsay.

The recent campaign in West Victoria afforded an instance of the utter helplessness and want of executive ability on the part of the managers. Mr. Bryans was left to depend on a button-hole canvass;

They have in every single instance injured the conservative candidates, and have played the clear grit game throughout. The list of ridings named in another column as having been lost by the duplicity of the patron leaders is sufficient to have upset Sir Oliver Mowat, and placed Mr. Meredith in power. But their game was to save Sir Oliver, not to defeat him.

And right well have they done it. "Many independent reformers will ally themselves with the patrons who otherwise will join the liberal-conservatives"was the logic of the grit and jesuit leaders Thus the conservatives will become weakened, the reformers will hold their own, and in many cases the patrons by forcing the conservatives to withdraw their candidates will secure the election of grit patrons who, as all the reform party know, "are just as good as straight

Despite warnings from us and others the liberal-conservatives in many cases were misled. They backed the grit patron candidates with the result of electing staunch followers of Sir Oliver's. In nearly every case where a patron has been elected it has been by means of the conservative vote and it almost alone.

In North Bruce McNaughton came out this time as an out and out P.P.A., rather than as patron and was elected with the conservative vote.

In South Bruce the conservatives had a good chance of winning if left alone against the reformers, but the patron was in the way. The conservatives then withdrew their candidate and supported the patron, the usual result; the grit-patrons voted grit and lost the riding. In centre Bruce the conservatives were

In Dundas, East Elgin, South Essex, Frontenac, Grenville, Centre Grey, North Hastings, Lennox, Leeds, East Northumberland, Prince Edward, East Simcoe, West Simcoe, Centre Simcoe, Stormont, East Victoria, and East Wellington, the patrons deliberately have proven the means of trying to wreck the chances of the conservatives: and in several instances. the conservatives; and in several instances they succeeded. They thus proved ot great benefit to Sir Oliver.

In the following ridings the conserva-tives showing their desire to deal loyally by the patrons, withdrew their candidates, with the result that the grits are nearly all elected, for the patron and indepen-dent candidates were as a rule selfish, narrow men who could not win an enthunarrow men who could not win an enthusiastic support; —North Brant, South Grey, Haldimand, West Hastings, East Hastings, West Huron, East Kent, East Lambton, West Lambton, East Middlesex, North Middlesex, Monck, Nipissing, South Norfolk, North Norfolk, North Oxford, South Oxford, South Perth, Prescott, North Waterloo, South Waterloo, South Wellington and North Wentworth
