Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites because they find their patients can tolerate it for a long time, as it does not upset the stomach nor derange the digestion like the plain oil.

Scott's Emulsion is as much easier to digest than the plain oil as milk is easier to digest than butter. Besides, the fishfat taste is taken out of the oil, and it is almost palatable. The way sickly children, emaciated, anæmic and consumptive adults, gain flesh on Scott's Emulsion is very remarkable.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Andrew Carnegie has aroused British wrath by saying that it would pay England to burn up her railroad equipment and replace it with American models.

A bronze fork was picked up at Kouyunjik, in Assyria, in 1873; it was believed to date from 1,100 or 1,200 B. C. A flesh book of three teeth is mentioned in the Bible, I. Samuel, xi., 13, about 1,165 B. C., but this was not a fork in our sense of the word, but a hook used to draw the boiled meat from the pot.

In the Russian army there is one particular regiment of infantry of the guards formed by Emperor Paul. Emperor Paul had a typical Kalmuck nose of the most excruciatingly uptilted pattern, and since then, out of compliment to him, all the officers and men of this particular regiment have noses of the same shape. The largest cannon in the world was taken by the English when India was conquered. The cannon was cast about the year 1,500, and was the work of a chief named Chuleby Koomy Khan, of Ahmednuggur. The inside of the big gun was fitted out with seats, and is a favorite place for English officers to go for a quiet sleep. One of the many reasons why Kansas is regarded as a freak State is found in the names of its newspapers. Most of the freak titles are borne by Populist papers. Here are a few examples: The Torch of Liberty, People's Beveille, Modern Light, Chanticleer, Integral, Co-Operator, Bazoo, Tiller and Toiler, New Leaf, Drum-Beat. A San Francisco photographer claims to have completed a device by which every railroad ticket may be made to bear the photograph of the original purchaser, as a preventive of scalping. The whole process of taking the pic-ture, developing the negative and printing the portrait on a portion of the ticket can be done, he says, while the purchaser is paying for his ticket, or in one minute at the longest. The apparatus is elaborate, but the inventor thinks it is infallible, and that railway companies ought to be willing to pay a good price for a perfect method of preventing scalping, by making tickets absolutely non-transferable.

Lady Authors and Hysterics.

Women, naturally, take the lead in an industry to which their desultory and amateur education conducts them. I am not speaking, of course, about the accomplished author of David Grieve, whose education and knowledge are thorough and manly, and who does not make hysterics her favorite motif. But hysterics really seem to be the chief is at least free of the sin of hypocrisy literary motive of some strangely popular lady authors. The tendency rep- in the public press. their sex. They want to have all the freedom which men exercise, even that which they exercise contrary to the acknowledged laws of Christian morals. Licentiousness, the claim "to enjoy," as lady novelists call it, at random, is bad enough in men, but in men it does not cause a break up of the family, and a reduction of society to something much below the state of the Digger Indians. For women to 'enjoy," that is, to behave like the nymphs of Otahelte in the Antijacobin, is, manifestly, to leave the new generation in the posture of young cuckoos bereft even of the comforts of a thrush's or a sparrow's nest. This obvious fact in natural history has always been regarded as a bar to the indiscriminate license of women. Horace condoles with them; a miserarum est neque amori dare ludum, and so forth; but some of the hysterical ladies maintain their assertion of feminine equlity in these matters. Though their words make a talk, and are devoured as stolen fruit, it is not likely that this particular "tendency" will do much harm. "Offences must needs come," but scandals about girls are not, perhaps, so numerous now as they have been in several other less earn est periods. Women are, on the whole, naturally averse to following the path pointed out by the more daring romancers of their sex. Again, the exceptions who want to "live up," or rather down, to their favorite novels are usually unattractive and therefore, by the selfishness of wicked man, are idemned to theory.-Andrew Lang, in North American Review for August.

Hydrophobia From Polecats.

"Is the skunk a dangerous animal? should say so." remarked Mr. E. P. Glaze, of St. Louis. "I know very many people will be surprised at the assertion, but there is one species of this unpopular tribe that is as much to be dreaded as a rattlesnake, as I learned one year while sojourning in Western Texas. One night in midsummer a party of us were camping out on the prairie of Liano county when we were awakened by the screams of a colored boy who had been taken along to cook for the outfit. He said that something had bitten him, and examination showed that his hand was pretty badly torn. There were unmistakable evidences of skunk in the vicinity, and there was no doubt that it had done the deed. "The sequel is that a few days later the boy died a most horrible death of hydrophobia. I learned tht it was not a rare thing for the bite of these miserable little cats to produce that dread ailment, and several well-authenticated cases of it occurred before I left the state. Some people think that hydrophobia finds its origin in these ani-

MODESTY AND THE BICYCLE.

The Bloomer Girl's Influence on a Vexed Question of Morals.

One reads a deal of clotted nonsense about the "immodesty" of the skirtless costume, not, I think, because any one believes it is immodest, but because its opponents find in that theme an assured immunity from prosecution in making an indecent exposure of their minds. This talk of immodesty is simply one manifestation of public immorality—the immorality of an age in which it is considered right and reputable for women and girls in company with men, to witness the capering of actresses and dancers who in the name of art strip themselves to the ultimate inch, whose every motion in the saltatory rites is nicely calculated to display as much of the person as the law allows! Why else do they whir and spin till their make-believe skirts are horizontal? Why else do they spring into the air and come down like a collapsed parachute? These motions have nothing of grace; in point of art they are distinctly disagreeable. Their sole purpose is indelicate suggestion. Every male spectator knows this, every female as well; yet we he to ourselves and to one another in justificationlie, knowing that no one is thereby deceived as to the mature of the performance and our motives in attending it. We gabble of "art," and if that flimsy fiction were insufficient would doubtless gabble of duty. The only person that affects no illusion in the matter is the exhibiting hussy herself. She -save when condemning "bloomers"

As censors of morals the ladies of the ballet are perhaps half a trifle insincere; I like better the simple good faith of the austere society dame, who to a large and admiring audience of semi-nude men, displays her daughters' charms of person at the bathing beach -with an occasional undress parade of her own ample endowment. She is in deadly earnest, the good old girlshe is entirely persuaded of the wick-edness of the "bloomers." Why, it would hardly be more indelicate to wear her bathing suit in the street or drawing room! If she were not alto-gether a fool she would be deprived of that illustration, for a costume is no more indelicate in one place than in another.

One of the congenial ear-marks o the Philistine understanding is inability to distinguish inappropriateness from immodesty-between bad taste and faulty morals. The blush that would crimson the cheek of a woman shopping in evening dress (and women who wear evening dress sometimes retain the blush habit—such are the wonders of heredity!) would indubitably have its origin in a leven sense of exposure. It would make a cat laugh, but it would be an honest blush and eminently natural. The phenomenon requiring an explanation is the no-

In nations that cover the body for another purpose than decoration and protection from the weather, disputes as to how much of it and under what staces, should be covered are inevitable and uncomposable. Althe in nature and in art, the question of the nade will be always demanding adjustment and never be adjusted. In ancient Greece the disgraceful squabble was unknown; it did not occur to the great-hearted, broad-brained and wholesome people of that blessed land that any of the handiwork of the gods was ignoble. Nor are the modern Japanese vexed with "the question of the nude" save where their admirable civilization has suffered the polluting touch of ours they have not learned the infamy of sex. Among the sings in store for them are their conversion to decorous lubricity and instruction in the nice conduct of a ded mind. I am not myself prepared to utter judgment in all these matters. I do not know the precise degree of propriety exactly how suggestive it is at breakfast. I cannot say with accuracy when and where and why a costume is im-modest that is modest in a mixed crowd at the sea beach. But this I know, despite all the ingenious fictions, subtleties and sophistries wherewith that no man and no woman addicted play-going, society entertainments surf-bathing has the right to cens it in them I for one am far indisposed, and I confidently vious advantage to the commatth of binding him to his own nd removing the organ that he is an
