The Present Campaign

The Peterbero Review in the course of an editorial under the above heading, reterring to Mr. Stratton's appeal to conpervalves to enpport him, eage: "A candidate who supports the Hardy-Ross government with its iniquitous numbered ballot, with its army of officials that have fought the conservatives in Dominion as well as provincial contests, with its system of centralization instituted and maintained to thwart the free expression of public opicion, with its financial record that has dissapated a tenr million dellar proline and merbyaged the province for alliens mere, with its method of keeping tavestigation, with the aducational system which is admitted by Hon. Mr. Rose to b is need of reform, with its school back monepolies that cause parents and graviliens to pay one third more for the solved books for their children than they should with all there and many other stains upon its record, the candidate who supports the Hardy Ross government le and putitled to the vote of any liberal secure that role. And more than that many liberals will vote this time for a change, believing that it will be in the heat interests of the province."

The fact is well established new that long testing skirts are to be wern with house gowns—by house gowns are meant evening gowns, coepilon gowns, or any gowns suited for house twen. As yet we have not gone back to long skirts for street wear, although even walking gowns have the skirts long enough to require holding up in street. Many of the long skirts are extremely graceful. There is one style which is made with very little gering, it quite sheathlike, with the fulnewlaid in small pleats, but out to flare out at the end of the train, In soft silks, satins, poplins, and cashmerse this is very attractive, for the lines are so graceful. The plain lock is broken by bands of trimming either down the essens or around foot, or else with patterns of embruddery and out work put on the front breadth. There is ovidently an intention of restoring drapery, for some very smart skirts have the front and side breadths loug enough to allow of draping just a little back of the hip, and showing a glimpee of an under pettleost of different material. This is a becoming style of skirt, and looks especially well when the best breadths are long enough to train,—Harper's Rasser.

THE GRIM REAPER

The stock theory of educators has always been that of Horace Mann, the ways been that of Horace Mann, the schools by heling so much better. This plan has nall, the school and the canber in a certain school asked a quity large of the papers of it, and when the schools relacidly an of the leading private would prefer half a pie or two thirds of it, and looks especially well when the best breadths are long enough to train,—Harper's Rasser.

THE GRIM REAPER school teachers in New York once told me that one of her chief obstacles was in > schools. It is possible that the very excess of studies in these schools, the too rigid discipline which sometimes provails, the want of elasticity in the course of study, operate more to keep away such children than any more social projudice. It is within my knowledge that there are parents who would be glad, on mere social grounds, to send their children, even their girls, to public schools, and who are yet prevented because they think that pupils are there too hard worked, or have too little opportunity for the selection of their own studies, or for relief in case of delicate health. The more advanced physiological views of the present day are opposed to risking, even for the sake of knowledge, the physical health of a growing girl; and the highest educational authorities tend more and more toward extending downward into tach high-schools at least, the system of the selection, one of the selection, one of the selection, one of the selection, one of the served.

Now this snag in itself is not a formidable affair. It is made up simply of two diverse opinions about resting. Yet no agged reef is more dangerous, and all those who cannot sail over it must tnevitably be wreeked on it.

A man, for instance, has worked all day out of doors—in the fields maybe. He has had the air and the sun, and converse with men of his kind. Resting to him means coming home, stretching out his limbs, and breathing in domestic

He Was Excused.

The teacher of a city school received the following note explaining the absence of one of her pupils the day before.

"Plese excours Henry for absents yeasterday. Him as me got a chance at a ride to a funeral in a charrige, an I let him stay to home, as he had never rode in a charrige an never went to a funeral, nor had many other pleasures. So plese excours."—Harper's Bound Table.

No matter how obstinate the cough, how severe the cold, Forway Pine Symp will cure quickly. No other remedy equals it in curative power over threat and lung troubles."—

Book-keeping has been reduced to such an exact science in the big metropolitan banks that the clerks are expected to strike a correct balance at the close of each day's work, no matter if the transactions run into the millions of dollars. When the books fall to balance, the whole force of the bank is put to work to discover the error, and no clerk starts for home until it is discovered, whether it amounts to two cents or $2000. Generally a quarter of an hour will bring the mistake to light, but sometimes the hunt is kept up until late into the night.

Outside stood the crowd of clerks from the neighboring bank. It appeared that, in making a cash fransaction, one of the banks had paid the other forty-five cents too much. As a result half a hundred men had worked for nine hours, and the search was only ended then because a bright clerk, notiting the light in the bank opposite, shrewdly guessed the cause, hunted up the cash clip, and discovered the error. — Harper's Round Table.

W. C. WOODS,

DEAR SER.—I have much pleasure in stating that the Gurney Oxford Hot Wester System which you set up in my house in the actumn of 1894 was fully what you represented it to be, and gave entire satisfaction. There was no dust, no smoke, no gas, no leakage, and the air seemed pleasant and agreeable to breathe, so that no one had a cough in my house during the entire winter. Notwithstanding the severity of last winter our house was so comfortable that we had to go outside to find if the day was cold, while the quantity of coal consumed was only a little more than we had burned in former winters to one large ocal stove with less rooms to be heated. The Furnace was easily managed, and with ordinary care has temperature of the house could be kept at any degree desired. I can heastly recommend the system of heating to any one who during our Canadian winter desires to enjoy what I can best describe as Said Comfort.
