and other weeds were manfected, although they were quite young. A alrenger solution might have destroyed the other weeds. The leaves of the grain were slightly is jured, but quickly recovered. No effect was noticed on clover or inserne sown with the cereal. It is stated that a fifteen par cent. solution of iron sulphate, where it would be cheaper, may be substituted for the copper sulphate. The cost of treatment where power spraying machines are used is given at approximately $2 per acre.

New Way to Kill Weeds.

A notable discovery of a new method of destroying weeds in young arain is an nounced by Mone. Hitter in the Journal d'Agriculture Pratique, France. anounced by Mone. Hitter in the Journal d'Agriculture Pratique, France, namely, that of spreying the weeds with a solution of sulphate of copper. Attention was first directed to the plan by Mone. Bonnet, a vine grower, who noticed, when spraying his vines, that certain wild plants accidently sprinkled with the copper solution were killed. This spring it has been tried more extensively by agriculturists. One Mone. Jules Bernard found that the dressing caused wild mustard to turn black first, then white, and if the weeds did not perish they were prevented. tuen black first, then white, and if the weeds did not perish they were prevented from further development and consequently from the production of flawers and seed. Mons. Brandin, president of the Society of Agriculture at Melun, tried the dressing in fields of wheat and oats infected with wild mustard and thistiles, and while the corn continued to grow vigorously, the two weeds perished, except in one field where rain fell abundantly in the night after the application; oven there the weeds were so nearly killed that they were no longer dangerous
