THE CANADIAN OUTLOOK.

The Hon. Goo. E. Foster's lecture in the Collegiate Institute on Friday night was one that every young man in the country should have heard. It was enobling, inspiring and clevating. It is pleasing to find one who although he is wrapped up in the affairs of his party, can find time to come out on the broader, more embracing platform of the national sphere. We have been accustomed so long to associate Mr. Foster with the political that we are surprised to meet him on another platform and we are delighted, more than delighted to hear one who has such unbounded faith in his country, such noble aspirations and high ideals for her.

Mr. Foster does not believe in the absorption of the Dominion by the United States. That question had been fought out in the Revolutionary War, and the invitation to cast in their lot with the States, had been spurned by the hardy Frenchmen in 1812, who armed them selves and stood up in stardy defence for the country that gave them freedom and courished and protected them. The orisis had been reached in 1891 when the electorate dismissant high the fact is an easy speaker and the many from the flate, the latter being in receiled, Mayor Taylor, midst tremendous applause, introduced Mr. Foster is an easy speaker and the more in the flate, the latter being in the country that gave them freedom and courished and protected them. All were to "hold faster and faster to an absolute integrity," "to have an enlight-ened public spirit" and "to have higher individual and publicideals." He exhorted the young man to pitch their ideals high, fer youth is the time of noble and generous feeling, and afterwards the world would knock much of it out of them. He entreated them to spurn the dollar bid and hold fast their franchise, their greatest weapen. The elequent oration plosed with an appeal to patriotism and a beautiful percration depicting Canada's

The orisis had been reached in 1891 when the electorate dismissed the thought of unreastricted reciprocity and that vote decided the isaue, for in Mr. Foster's opinion, and he had many who agreed with h'm from both parties, had unrestricted reciprocity been enforced the ultimate result would have been our absorption in the United States.

Nor was Canada to set up housekeeping for herself. She was practically independent in fact as well as theory, which is no doubt a potent factor in nation building, she would also certainly gain the right to support a navy. Mr. Foster had a grander conception of Canada's future than her independence, that of imperial. Is.

We were to form part of a greater than 22 years since he added a popularie, introduced Mr. Foster is an easy speaker and the apparent ease with which he uttered the most failshed sentences, made it a pleasure to listen to him. that led him into the lecture. It was more that led him into the lecture. It was more that led him into the lecture. It was more than 22 years since he had appeared on any lecture platform outside of the political and since that time he had had most of the literary training shoved out of him. His lecture would be retrospect and prospect with some cogliations as to our responsibilities at present, and he hoped to etrike no discordant phase of his subject. There was possibly no more intense and absorbing study than the development of life in its different phases. Take for instance the little brown seed, which is neither beautiful nor promising but under nature's unseen forces puebes above ground and shoots into a thing of beauty. Take the babe and watch the development of intellect, the power of speech and so on, or taking individuals on a larger scale; the study of nation building. It must be borne in mind however that a cross must not be put opposite any other name, if so the ballott will not be consted. Each elector has two votes, which he may give for one candidate or one each to two candidates.

Two candidates are in the field for Mayor, Mr. Thomas Walters and Mr. Richard Kylie; the name of Mr. Robert Smyth has also been spoken of, but we have not learned if it is his intention to be a candidate. Several names are mentioned as councillors, some of whom would make good representatives at the council board, while some would, if the best interests of the town were considered, be better to be left at home. Next Monday, however, will bring to the front those who are aspirants for civic honors.

The mare dictionary explanation of patriotism which is love of country, is not so easily understood. Patriotism is not born but is a matter of growth. Take for instance the child. At first there is no love. Take it his same way. Suppose that at the earliest instance the child is taken from the mother and growth. Take for instance the child at staken from the mother and growth of the mother way. It grows up to love that person. As the child grows conscious that the mother and growth of grows conscious that the mother and growth of grows conscious that the mother and growth of grows conscious that the mother and growth. Take the same to have the particular and growth of growth of the child. It is a served that the mother and growth of growth. Take the love the mother, and what mother's act as the best thoughts, and mother's act as the best thoughts, and mother's act are the best cate. Every child to a greater or less extent idealises its mother. So with patriotism. One learns to love his own section and locality, and be it ever so humble it is the dearest place on earth to him. The Canadian loves Canada's glades, its streams, its sun-kissed slopes, and monthly in the particular Canada's resources stand unrivalled. The great seas on either side of us are as rich in their way as the north-west areas, and year by year the fishermen are extracting their wealth. There is access to t', country by innumerable harbors and coming inland by our immense inland seas, our splendid waterways, we find great areas of fertile land, militons upon millions of acres in extent and forcet elmost boundless and almost inexhaustable under fair treatment (appliance) and militions upon millions of soces in extent and forest simost boundless and almost inexhaustable under fair treatment (applause) and added to our forests there are maneral resources, ten years ago almost unknown, and not yet sufficiently explored to unfold what hidden wealth they hold, but 100 years hence their vast richness will surprise the world for as yet we have only begun to ceratch the surface of our mineral areas. We are richly endowed and equipped with our hardy merchantile, marine and fishing, our ports and harbors, great coal deposite stretching from Atlantic to Pacific, equippemen, not only for fuel and warmth, but for the mechanism of our great countral railways, propogated by the energy and pluck of the government and corporations. Then too our inland waters team with resources and east, and west, and north and south magnifictent waterways have been constructed.

Have we not one of the most stable governments in the world? It is notificated on any sect, creed or race, and the basis is so wide that any honest man need not be without his right of voting, a basis as intelligent as in any other country in the world. Law and justice, those great principles on which the prosperity of a country depends, are of the best and our British law and British justice are known from one end of the world to the other. In other institutions, whatever they may be, Uanada was in no way behind. Art and literature as yet are only in their infancy, but would grow as we developed greater leisure and wealth.

THE OUTLOOK.

THE OUTLOOK. He thought Canada's outlook had improved within the last 25 years, and it was a bright and alluring one. Not more than 35 years ago it was a local or provincial one with our scattered and diversed institutions, when each province treated its neighbors in matters of trade as foreigners and aliene. The Confederation was the first great uplifting this country got. Those were wise men who in 1864-'68, convened and drew up an actual vigorous plan the bare outlines of the nation which was to be in this part of the coutient. The outlook is indeed an inspiring one and refuses any be in this part of the continent. The outlook is indeed an inspiring one and refuses any bounds that do not prove themselves as wide as the Empire itself. This is the foundation for that patriotic feeling that make it absolutely impossible to take one or two phases of the situation, other than the Imperial one.

ABSORPTION IN UNITED STATES. Our existence commenced two centuries ago and our geographical relation to the United States has time and again forced on the country the queet, and absorption in the States. In the Revolutionary war we were kept from absorption by the intregual subjects in Quebec, They tried to force it on us by armies, not large, but powerful in comparison, but we then scorned and defied them. We were close to it again in 1812, and then again our stardy forefathers, spurned equally the invitation and Frenchmen and Englishmen stood up in brave delence of the country that sheltered them. (Applause). The crisis was reached probably within the last ten years. In 1891 the problem was fought and then decided forever, for though there is disagreement, Mr. Foster's firm belief was that it the electorate had decided for Unrestricted Reciprocity, it would finally have resulted in absorption, and he had many backers from both parties that made him think his assumption was right. (Applause) It seemed to him now that the question was abolished from the political platform, that it was forever settled and would not be resurrected. On the blackboard of history we would write "No Absorption" — "No Enemity"—"Friendly latere urse"—Eriendly Rivairy." "Friendly latere urse"—Eriendly Rivairy." "These will mark our attitude—A yoloe—"Don't beg favora."

We ought to rise to a higher citizenship.
We occupy a central position. For what?
For the Empire. A gateway between the old world and the new. We have ports where Great Britain can coal. Great Britain is mistress or the seas, but sweeping the seas wouldn't give her command of the wheat fields of Russia. Our grain producing power must be thought of in connection with the Empire. Above all we need that feeling of patriotism, the fire that burns off the dross and leaves the metal pure. Perhaps we need the shock of contention, perhaps to see the flag in danger, that which is symbolic of all that is dearest and most sacred to us, that we may rally to its support and have our heroism awakened.

Mr. Foster's closing words were a fitting climax to such an elequent lecture. In a beautiful word picture, Canada was shown as a splendid maiden robed in the flag with a gariand of maple and eak and at the touch of her wand there sprung into glorious activity agriculture, manufacturing industries, commercial life, education and other institutions that help to build a great nation.

The applause that marked his conclusion was simply tarrific and it was several minutes before sufficient quiet reigned so that the Hon. Senator Dobson could move and Mr. R. J. McLaughlin could second the yote of thanks which was so enthusiastically carried.
