New York, Sept. 9.—The World has a special from Washington which says:—There is strong probability that unless more haste is exercised by the state department in beginning an actual settlement of the Alaskan boundary question serious complications may result between the United States and Great Britain. The action of the Canadian surveyors last week in so locating the 141st meridian as to throw 200 gold mines of Alaska contained in a strip from three to eight miles wide, in Canadian territory, is likely at any time to precipitate such a conflict of authority as cannot be ignored by the home governments. These mines are operated by Americans, thousands of whom have gone to the Alaskan fields since the discovery of gold, and they will not readily submit to the stricter rules and regulations which the Canadian government will likely attempt to take charge of the disputed territory on the strength of the report made by surveyor Ogilvie, that the land is on the Canadian side. The officials of the state department do not in any degree recognize Ogilvie's survey as in any way binding upon the United States, and no concessions will be made upon the strength of his conclusion. Montreal, Sept. 9. — Mademoiselle Josephine Proulx, school teacher, has entered an action against the Rev. F. X. E. Eremont, parish priest of St. Cuneogonde, for $5000 damages. The action has arisen from the following circumstances: The religious parish of St. Cuneogonde extends inside the limits of the city of Montreal. The Rev. Father Eremont, it is stated, desired to have the schools in that portion of the city which belongs to St. Cuneogonde for religious purposes placed under the direction of school commissioners of St. Cuneogonde. His desires were not acceded to and subsequently the school commissioners of Montreal made a grant to a catholic school in the disputed territory conducted by Miss Proulx of four dollars per annum per pupil. This encouragement of Miss Proulx's establishment, it is alleged, displeased the curé, and one day, it is further alleged, when she was in the church with her pupils, he turned them all out, threatening that if they did not go when he made the signal he would have a policeman turn them out. The reports of this action spread quickly through the parish, and Miss Proulx alleges, several parents took their children away from the school. The curé, she states, accompanied her to the school with several remarks, speaking of "School of strangers," "oppositionschool," etc. Father Eremont, seen with reference to the above allegations which are made by Miss Proulx, declined to make any counter statement at present.

A Chunk of Gold. People have been reading a whole lot recently about British Columbia gold, and now they have a chance to see some of it. The big gold brick from Cariboo, referred to in the World last week, has arrived, and is in the large vault of the bank of Montreal. To-day, Wednesday, it will be placed on exhibition at the bank. It would be a hard matter for anyone to steal the brick, as it is so heavy that one man could not carry it. It weighs upon it is its weight—4745 ounces, and the value of the piece of precious metal is $31,022. It doesn't look much for a money, but the freight charges on it were about $200. The Dominion express company were entrusted with the care of the brick to bring it from the coast. Extra precautions were made to ensure its safety. Visions are said to have been seen, by the way, do not look like a brick, at all, at the bank of Montreal, in Toronto.

Friendship and the Nurse. "Hattie and you do not seem to be friends any more," said the short, thin woman, as she paid her fare. "Well, no," she replied, "the tall stout woman, slipping her knees back in her pocketbook. "You know the nurse she thought so much of came to live with me last winter." "Why now did that happen?" asked the short, thin woman. "M—well, I suppose it was because she heard me say that I paid my nurse 50 cents more a week than Hattie did, and that I wanted one at the time. Of course, I didn't just say that to her, you know, but she heard me. Maybe, I mentioned, too, that I give my nurse three evenings out a week. Girls will be girls, you know, and my husband can look after the children on those evenings, as well as she can." "M—hm. It keeps a man from finding fault with his wife's management, too, if he's kept busy while he's at home." "Yes, and I've noticed that by the time they are in bed he's too tired to think of going out. Well, as I was saying, that girl came to me the very next week. Oh, and the stories she told me about Hattie, even to the things she had said about me, you'd scarcely believe. These girls couldn't seem to remember any of them at all, but after I'd jorged her memory she told me lots. Hattie wanted to quarrel with me, I could see that, but she didn't quite dare, she knew how much she owed me. Besides, I was as sweet as honey to her every time we met." "Then, how comes it that you are not friends now?" "Oh, didn't I tell you? The girl went back to her after a while." "Oh!" said the short, thin woman. The Fight was Called Off. The two gentlemen who had been having a sidewalk discussion of the tariff question had passed from personalities to tauntings, these in epithet, and were just about to proceed to physical argument when a little man in a summer coat of the style of 1883 rushed up to them and said: "Excuse me, gentlemen, but if you are going to fight would you mind stepping over into my back lot? I ain't very far away, and I got my mother-in-law laid up in the back bedroom with a broken leg, and I can't stay in the same house with her and I think of the seen a right good sweep it would cheer the old lady up to an amazing degree. Is it a go?" It was not, but by the time the tariff debaters and let the little man escape he was in a blissful condition that reckoned not of a whole household of irritable mother-in-law.
