

If we told you that your baby was starving, that it actually didn't get enough to eat, you might resent it. And yet there are thousands of babies who never get the fat they should in their food or who are not able to digest the fat that they do get. Fat is a necessity to your baby. It is baby life and baby beauty. A few drops of Scott's Emulsion for all little ones one, two and three years of age is better than cream for them. They thrive and grow on it.

The following is from the Alliston, Ont., Herald of the 21st inst.—Mr. Wm. Morrison, more familiarly known to the present generation as "Daddy," died at his son's residence, near Alliston, on Monday last. The old gentleman moved from the township of Ops, near Lindsay, to this section forty-seven years ago. He resided of late years in his homestead opposite the town hall until last summer, when advancing years led him to the city. He fell into a state of forgetfulness, and he then went to pass the remainder of his days with his son. He was at the time of his death between 100 and 104 years. The second partner of his joys and sorrows preceded him about twenty years ago. At one time "Daddy" held considerable influence in the race. His remains were interred in the church of England burying ground at Cookstown on Tuesday last. About ten years ago Mr. Morrison gave the editor a description of the waters and portages of the Seouge about the year 1810, and also of the wildness of that whole section which at present comprises the thriving town of Lindsay and its immediate prosperous agricultural section. In the early part of the century he and a Mr. Wellington Britton spent many months trapping and hunting on the Seouge river and immediate lakes, and more than once had difficulty in quieting down some of the hostile Indians who then roamed through the neighborhood, extending from Fort Perry on the south to the Buckhorn section on the east. On one occasion their canoes and provisions were taken from them by these redskins, and for four days they subsisted with all their hardship, the old gentleman enjoyed its fascinations. His remains were interred in the church of England burying ground at Cookstown on Tuesday last. About ten years ago Mr. Morrison gave the editor a description of the waters and portages of the Seouge about the year 1810, and also of the wildness of that whole section which at present comprises the thriving town of Lindsay and its immediate prosperous agricultural section. In the early part of the century he and a Mr. Wellington Britton spent many months trapping and hunting on the Seouge river and immediate lakes, and more than once had difficulty in quieting down some of the hostile Indians who then roamed through the neighborhood, extending from Fort Perry on the south to the Buckhorn section on the east. On one occasion their canoes and provisions were taken from them by these redskins, and for four days they subsisted with all their hardship, the old gentleman enjoyed its fascinations. A son and two grandchildren survive the old gentleman here, and other relatives reside in the neighborhood of Lindsay. Peterborough has appointed a relief officer to look after the town's poor. By having an officer who will personally investigate into charity cases it is thus assured that only the deserving will secure aid. The Ontario government sold the whole Niagara power for $25,000 a year, and now one firm offers to pay $50,000 a year for 60,000 horse power.

TESLA'S NEW INTERRUPTER. An Electrical Current Broken 50,000,000 Times a Second. Nikola Tesla, the great electrician, has taken out patents for a device for producing almost insupportable electrical vibrations, and the Electrical Review gives full description of the invention and its uses. It was by the use of this device that Mr. Tesla has been able to demonstrate, in scientific illustration by means of vacuum tubes, that were not in mechanical contact with the electric source. Under the influence of a current of electricity the interrupted 50,000,000 or 80,000,000 times a second the tubes with which Tesla was experimenting burst into brilliant white light, which was demonstrated by photography as electric light, although the tubes were entirely disconnected and stood so far away from the exciting coils that the Tesla sat in a large armchair between the tubes and the coil while he was photographed by the light of the tubes. No such effect has ever been produced by any other means, and this gives only a rough indication of the power in which Mr. Tesla's invention is intended to be used in the production of Roentgen rays, the making of ozone and argon, and for electro-therapeutic treatment. The simplicity of the latter is one of the remarkable features.

Rescue by an Equine Hero. A graphic story is told of Surgeon-Captain Grey, one of the officers who served in Rhodesia. In the attack on Mashangoni the horses began to drop, and the soon thirteen lay on the ground, and it looked as if the men would all be killed. Evidently the captain thought so, for he virtually turned his back on the men, and though every man to fight the best he could, but a pitiful relationship to the 100,000,000 or more vibrations that he which Mr. Tesla calculated that he had obtained from his device. The simplicity of the latter is one of the remarkable features.
