There is much talk in Lindsay, as everywhere, about the wonderful tales from the Yukon, of gold in shovelfuls. Every second man one meets is either threatening to go or wishing he might. But the warning of Mr. P. B. Weare, vice-president of the North American trading company, as to the hardships to be borne by prospectors in the Klondike country, should not be unheeded. The hardships to be borne are certain; the profits are more problematic. No doubt there is gold to be got; but it is late to set out this season, and intending millionaires would do well to put off making their fortunes till next summer.
