Points Which the Public Would

Do Well to Remember, Another point I desire to call attention to in this connection is the fact that a great many people imagine that a writer arrogates to himself the possession of all the virtues which he lauds. If we speak with enthusiasm of the good and pure we are supposed to be pharisaical enough to claim all the goodness and purity of which we speak. If we write of religion and extol its benefits in uplifting the individual and exalting a nation, narrow minds presume that in this, as in every other case, we are individualized. in every other case, we are individualizing and must necessarily, to be honest, be possessed of a devoutness so conspicuous as to desire to make ourselves an example to the rest of mankind. If a example to the rest of mankind. If a reference is made to honor or manly courage, the strabismic eyes of those who sneer at everything take on them a cunning look and wonder how about the writer himself! If a happy or unhappy home life be mentioned, some poor souls cannot conceive of anyone writing about that which is not present and pressing upon the mind and life and pressing upon the writer himself or herself. This tendency to individualize and presume that we are always introspective, always digging into our memory or unearthing our own secrets memory or unearthing our own secrets is a depressing and restraining influence. It is the privilege of everyone to reason from what we know up to that which we do not know. Those who have a knowledge of human nature and who have cultivated it by studying their fellows, may conceive of many scores of things, and with the studying their fellows, may conceive of many scores of things and write of them as if they were real life without touching upon their own real life without touching upon their own experience. For instance, a man who has had a happy home life is not debarred from knowing what an unhappy home life would be, for unfortunately he sees it in many of the homes he is privileged to enter. John Howard Payne, who wrote Home, Sweet Home, never had a home, yet his pen produced that which has made the rude as well as the cultured weep when, far away that which has made the rude as well as the cultured weep when, far away from home and friends, they have heard the well-known strain. I think it is a good rule in reading as well as in writing not to presume that conversation or composition must be confined to the sorrows which are tearing our hearts, or to the joys which make us gay. If this be observed, a thousand misapprehensions may be prevented, and shots which we think are made at us will leave us unharmed. The soldier on the battlefield who thinks the entire force of the enemy are aiming at him force of the enemy are aiming at him and endeavoring to compass his death, will be wounded in every part and finally die of fright. When we get hit and hurt it is a wise thing to quietly go to the hospital and we shall create the constant of the constant more sympathy for ourselves by con-cealing our injuries than by parading them.—Don, in Saturday Night.

The Insect World.

Professor Henry Skinner of the Academy of Natural Sciences, in lecturing A book on Central American biology ntions 30,114 insect species belonging

With 2,000,000 insect species in the world, and only 200,000 described to onte, at 5600 per annum it would take 340 years to describe the remaining milion-odd; and even then entomology would be comparatively in its infancy, for classifying is only preparatory to further investigation.

In Central America one small family of beetles exceeds in number of species the entire mammalia.

There are in the United States 110 aplarian societies, eight journals devoted to bee culture, fifteen steam factories kept constantly manufacturing materials for the 300,000 bee culturists, and the annual product of honey in the United States is 63,894,186 pounds.

According to the cloverth Weight

According to the eleventh United States census the annual output of honey and wax was valued at $7,000,-000. The present estimated value of bee products is $20,000,000 per annum.

The cochineal bug (which supplies the coloring matter in carmine) is so tiny that 70,000 weigh only one pound.

The female cochineal bug is wingless and there are 200 females to one male.

In one year the carmines to one male. In one year the exports of cochineal from the Canary Islands amounted to 6,310,000 pounds, valued at $4,000,000—Philadelphia Record.

The present Mexican people are of mixed ancestry—Spanish, Aztec and the Chichmees tribes. The origin or the Aztecs is shrouded in mystery. All that is known of the people is that they came from the north and after wandering from from the north and after wandering from place to place founded in 1325 the city of Tenochititlau, or Mexico. When Cortes invaded Mexico, in 1519, the Aztec throne was occupied by Montezuma. The Africans belong to one of the great divisions of the human family called by Dr. Latham Atlantidae, the Ethiopic of other ethnologists. Originally all the nations inhabiting the southern part of the globe, as known to the ancients, or all men of dark brown or black color the globe, as known to the ancients, or all men of dark brown or black color were called Ethopians. Later this name was given more particusarly to the inhabitants of the countries south of Libya and Egypt, or the Upper Nile—the present Nubia, Senaar, Kordofon and Abyssinia. The accounts which the ancients have left with respect to the people are, even where they are not of an entirely fabulous nature, extremely scanty and untrustworthy.

He Leadeth Me.

In pastures green? Not always; sometimes Who knoweth best, in kindness leadeth me In weary ways, where heavy shadows be.

Out of the sunshine warm, and soft and bright, Out of the sunshine into darkest night: I oft would faint with sorrow and affright.

Only for this-I know He holds my hand, So whether in green or desert land I trust, although I may not understand.

And by still waters? No, not always so: Ofttimes the heavy tempests round me blow, And o'er my soul the waves and billows go. But when the storms beat loudest. and I cry Aloud for help, the Master standeth by, And whispers to my soul, "Lo, it is I."

Above the tempest will I hear Him say. Beyond this darkness lies the perfect day, In every path of thine I lead the way.'

So, whether on the hilltops high and fair I dwell, or in the sunless yalleys, where The shadows lie-what matter? He is there. And more than this; where'er the pathway

He gives me no helpless broken reed, But His own hand, sufficient for my need.

So where He leads me I can safely go, And in the blest hereafter I shall know Why, in His wisdom, He hath led me so.

ed some of the vicissitudes of life like many another genius. Once when traveling he put up at an inn and remained there, unable to get away through lack of funds to settle his bill. The landlord frew suspicious that such was the case and his requests for a settlement grew more and more pressing. Finally young Raphael, in desperation, resorted to the following device:

tollowing device:

He carefully painted upon a table-top in his room a number of gold coins, and, placing the table in a certain light that gave a startling effect, he packed his few belongings and summoned his host.

"There," he exclaimed, with a lordly wave of his hand toward the table, "is enough to settle my bill and more. Now kindly show the way to the door."

The innkeeper, with many smiles and bows, ushered his guest out and then hastened back to gather up his gold. His rage and consternation when he discovered the fraud knew no bounds, until a wealthy English traveler, recognizing the value of the art put in the work, gladly paid him £50 for the table.—Harper's Round Table.

Why the Books Wouldn't Balance.

A bookkeeper in a local wholesale house has been spending sleepless nights for three weeks in fruitless efforts to make his books balance. There was an apparent shortness of $900 that could not be accounted for. He added up columns and struck balances until he was almost insane. He finally worked himself into that frame of mind that usually lands a man in Canada, the insane asylum, or a suicide's grave, when the manager of the house invited his confidence. Then they went over the books together, but the $900 shortage was still there.

The head of the house was called in, and the work of overhauling accounts commenced again. They had not gone far till they came to an entry of $1900.

"Why, that should be $1000," declared the employer. "How did it happen to be entered $1900?" Why the Books Wouldn't Balance

A careful examination showed that a fly had been smashed between the pages of the cash book, and one leg made a tail of the first cipher of the $1000 entry, converting it into a 2.—San Francisco. Post
