Yukon and Fame.

Written for The Warder. I would like to go to Yukon, But I hate to face the cold; For they say 'tis fair to look on,

With its mounts and mines of gold-Tho' no one of that is fonder, Yet 'tis frought with daugers yonder; So I think I will not wander, From my present cosy fold.

But I must confess there's pleasure, Just to sit before the glow, And pick nuggets up at leisure, (Only mentally you know);

Without treading rugged passes Where the ambitious die in masses, And not subject to such crosses, As famine, cold and snow.

This is only human nature, And a story often told;
Fame, too, waits each mortal oreature,
But the path is dark and cold. So we dampen our ambition, And retreat in cool submission.

To grow famous but in vision. Like the Yukon and its gold.

To the Patriot.

-CHAS, MCCAUGHEY.

Written for The Warder. Hall Patriot! Hall to thee Stronghearted, pure, When others fail to be Thou will endure. Thou still hast lifted us, On thee we bend, -Heaven's best gift to us

Earth's truest friend. When in the din of arms Men flee away; Who is it braves the storms Who wins the fray?

Let the fields answer who, Let the waves speak. 'Tis not the selfish few, 'Tis not the weak, Duty ne'er dims to thee,

Love ne'er ruus cold; Worlds might sing hymns to thee Monarchs uphold. Patriots uplifted them,

Patriots defend;

—Heaven's best gift to men,
Earth's truest friend, -CHAS. MCCAUGHEY.

The town of Bobcaygeon and Verulam held to stop it appearing in the weekly papers. I asked him if it was correct and true. He said it certainly was, but did not want it published. I regarded his request as cowardly and would not comply with it. from a watery grave.

On Monday night the residence of Mr. W. Woods, south of river, was entered by some man, who succeeded in terrifying the inmates, Mr. Woods' young family, nearly out of their wits. Mr. Woods is himself at present working on the river, and is not expected home till Christmas, and his eldest child awoke to find a strange man leaning on the bed. Her screams succeeded in arousing the other members of the family and the son, a boy about twelve years of age, slipped down a sheet held by the girls and succeeded in reaching the ground by way of the window, ran to a neigh-bor's for assistance. By this time the man evidently thought it time to leave, and coolly passed down stairs and out and no trace of him has yet been found.
