In the picturesque language of our office devil, the state of the sidewalks last Saturday was a corker. Speaking of "corks" reminds us of the snake editor. We originally intended to describe the conditions of affairs in his words, but finally decided his remarks on this matter would not be considered choice Eng.isb.

They were too highly colored, too vivid; they suggested brimstone and sulphur, and other things inconsistent with a christian life. He spoke from the "fullness of his heart," and his style was terse and forcible, nervous and expressive; but notwithstanding his originality and versatility, it lacked that fine classical finish for which his writings are so justly famous. But to return to that loyable youth, the devil, we think he enjoyed himself matter would not be considered choice English. the devil, we think he enjoyed himself immensely Saturday. It was his field day. With the best intentions possible, he upset more dignified old gentlemen and flurried old more dignified old gentlemen and flurried old ladies than on any previous occasion, and his heart was light from the consciousness of a duty well performed. And if anyone mildly intimated that there was a "method in his madness" his air of injured innocence would immediately disarm all foul suspicion. The first night of skating at the Victoria rink, last Saturday, was not characterized by a very large crowd. The opening of the season had not been fully advertised. The usual "three little girls," and the fancy-skating "sports" who haunt those precincts from December to March, were the most numerous attendants. A good deal of hard work on the past of the manager and his assistants had part of the manager and his assistants had brought the ice to a splendid condition despite the mild weather conditions of Saturday, and the few who were akating were late, which have been highly appreciated by our readers, but the current one, "A Tale of a Cross," is ahead of any of the others.

THE WHEELS OF HEALTH.

There is no better exercise for a young woman in thoroughly good health than bloycling. On the contrary, if she suffers from weakness or disease of the distinctly feminine organs, if she rides, at all, such exercise should be very sparingly indulged in. Women are peculiarly constituted and their general health is peculiarly dependent upon the health of the specially feminine organism.

It is the health of these delicate and important parts that "makes the wheels of general health go round." Their strength and vigor are as important to a woman as a mainspring to a watch, or a sprocket and chain to a bicycle. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of al medicinas for delicate woman. It makes them strong where they most need strength. Taken during the "Interesting interval," it banishes the usual squeamishness and makes baby's admission to the world easy and almost painless. It fits a woman for in-door work and out-door sports. Hencet druggists don't advise substitutes.

STATUTE LABOR.

A few weeks ago we drew attention to the question of statute labour, that however good in its day when the country was being settled, has fulfilled the object for which it was designed, namely, paying a certain amount of taxes in work. The time has come when in most townships it could be abolished with benefit to the municipalities. What is to hinder a vote being taken at the forthcoming municipal elections, to test the feeling of the people on the subject? The expense would be on the subject? The expense would be very little, if any, and the result would be an indication to the new councils of the feeling of the people on the matter. Now that the public mind is agitated as to having better roads, this would be a step, although a short one, in that direction.
