Lindsay, July 4, 1888.—1592.

Silks! - Silks! Silks!

A merchants way of dealing in Silks is a pretty fair test of his dealing in general. There are two reasons for the statement: The importance of Silk as an article of merchandise and the impossibility of being perfectly sure how any particular quarter yard is going to wear. It is worth something in estimating a man to know how he treats an important matter that involves some risk to his clients. There are two attitudes which the merchant may properly take towards this treacherous article of universal dress, he may say: we buy the Silks of the best markets; use the best skill we can command in choosing them; examine carefully before we sell them; and, if the Silks do not turn out successful in wear, the fault is back of us. The maker himself does not know how a particular piece of his own Silk is going to wear. The skillful workmen, thro' whose successive hands it has paseed from the cocoon to the last process of the finish, do not know. Nobody knows, the only way to find out is by trying, you have got to buy with whatever of risk there is, we do all we can to make it little, we cannot take it away.

This is the attitude he must take if he is frank and fair, unless the maker bears the risk somebody has got to bear it. The merchant can't, the maker can. If a maker chooses to insure his Silk, rely on the merchant to pass that insurance over to the weaver and deal justly with both, then the merchant may say this Silk may wear well or ill; we do not know how it will turn out; but if it goes too soon we'll replace the part that fails. Either attitude is proper. Either recognizes the unavoidable chance of dissapointment that lurks in every silk dress. One makes provision for that chance and the other notifies the buyer that the risk is hers. It depends on the maker what the merchant can do. Not every maker of silk, not every maker of good silk, not every maker of the very best silk is disposed to take the risk of his work. Some merchants of the highest standing never guarantee any Silk to wear. We take the middle ground. We warrant Silks that are warranted to us. If a responsible maker is willing to takethe risk of his work and trust to us to administer his guarantee we shall do it. We do not insist that he shall. We are prompted to this explanation by a series of Silks which we sell with agreement to replace without charge any part that may fail to be fairly durable. Let it be understood that the guarantee is ours as much as if the maker were not behind us, and that it is the makers, as much as if you were not looking to us for its fulfillment. The price of Silk is very low now, the depression is felt particularly in Staples, less in "Novelties," which always bring extravagant prices for the first few weeks. We refer today to Staples, to Silks of intrinsic value, to Silks that never lose their favor. Because they hold their place in dress they go up and down in the market according to the current price of silk and labor and tariff—hardly ever according to fashion. We open and offer one thousand yards of Black and Colored Mervilleaux Silks and Satins at 68 cents a yard, just half their value.

E. E. W. McGaffey.
