To the Raitor of The Warder. DEAR SIE, The enclosed letter was sent to the Post for publication two weeks ago has not appeared yet, will you kindly give it a place in your next issue. To the Editor of the Post:

Your correspondent of Aug. 3rd, is laboring under a mistake re "the false arrest," for as the young lady in question took the money and when she found she was going to get into further trouble over it immed iately returned it to one of the magistrates who sat upon the case, and handed it over to the looser. She was also convicted on another charge, but it being rather too small was not sent down. So you can see Mr. Editor she was not honorably acquitted, and more than that, there was no stupidity in the matter. Much more might be said if necessary.

The Great August Storm.

During the week ending August 21st, the United States were visited by a severe wind and rain storm which may fairly rank among the greatest storms of the year. It began on Monday, Toxas and the adjoining territory being the starting point. Thereo it moved on in a north-easterly direction, its center reaching Memphia, Tenn., at eight o'clock that evening; twelve hours later it reached Louisville, Ky.; and twelve hours more brought it to New York. A low barometer prevailed along its course, 29'46 being the Memphis and Louisville readings at Mr. Jas.
