A Dry Dock and The Barley Question.

LINDSAY, Nov. 9th, 1888.
To the Editor of The Warbler.

DEAR SIR.—I was in Ottawa last Tuesday presenting a petition to the Minister of Railways and Canals from the steamboat owners on the inland waters praying the government to construct a dry dock in connection with the new dam now building at Bobcaygeon, and I have every reason to hope that the same will be built. It will be a great convenience to owners of steamboats in this section of the country, as they have now to use the locks and thereby impede navigation, or let their boats remain unrepared until winter; which I understand they have often to do.

Having presented the petition for the lock and asked the desirability of its construction, I had nothing to do, and thought I would go to the Department of Agriculture and learn something about the barley question which has excited the editor of The Canadian Post so much of late, as if he was afraid I might do something to benefit the farmers; and I must confess that the fear of being held up in his very fertile imagination as "a laughing stock" did not for a moment deter me, as the farmers of the country know me, I presume, far better than the editor of The Post does. Well, I found the Minister of Agriculture as usual, affable and courteous, and I learned from him that the reason the Canadian barley did not find a good market in England was because the barley grown there was two rowed barley, a very plump, heavy grain, while the Canadian barley was four rowed, a much smaller grain. The trouble that in maturing, if the two kinds of barley are mixed the large, plump grain spoils much sooner than the other, and by the time the smaller grain spoils the other has begun to get blue mouldy.

In the London (Ont) district the brewers were obliged to discontinue purchasing barley as the two kinds of seed had got mixed, and it was found impossible to make good malt of it. They have therefore been obliged to buy their barley about Lindsay and Peterborough, where four rowed barley is grown. The government are going to purchase pure two rowed barley seed from Russia or Sweden, and if it proves a success as is expected, (that is, that a heavier yield per acre can be obtained than the four rowed barley) the government will purchase a cargo of it and sell it to the farmers at cost price; but farmers must understand that to insure a sale for malting purposes or distilling, the seed must be kept pure and the four rowed barley all got rid of. Of course all will depend upon the result of experiments, but surely it is the proper thing to try and get all the markets open for every thing we can produce in Canada, and not throw cold water upon anyone who tries to do anything.

In 1857 England imported 38,000,000 bushels of barley valued at about $10,000,000. Russia and Sweden supplied 17,000,000 bushels. I understand the Minister is trying to get accurate information about the different uses the barley raised and imported to England is put to. Some is fed to cattle, some is used for distilling purposes, and some for brewing beer. So that a really good article will bring much more than the average price. In 1857 19,000 horses were imported into England of which Canada sent only 261. Another year than horses, 1,929,390, Canada sent 100,000. Cheese imported into England in same year 205,000,000 lbs. Canada sent 70,888,882 lbs. (mostly good); but the United States sent 85,000,000 lbs. Eggs imported into England in same year 118,800,000. Canada sent none. Now they are sent from the continent of Europe and Ireland, and have to be sent by rail and ship; so there is nothing to prevent an article from being shipped to England from New York and Boston.

Apples, England imported in 1857 1,000,000 bushels. Canada sent 801,000 bushels. A great trade is sure to grow up in Canadian apples. The Maritime Provinces, particularly by the Annapolis Valley in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, are planting large orchards and growing fine fruit. There are many other things I have not mentioned, but my letter is too long already and I must apologise for taking up so much of your space, but it is in a good cause.

Yours truly,
ALAN HENDERSON.
