PRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1888. A Pretty Maid.

A protty maid a protestant, Was to a paper west; A member of the English church

She had been born and bred. It sorely grieved her husband's heart.
That she would not comply.
To join the popula church of Rome

He west anto the popish priest To toth him his end tato, "My wife's an unboliever, sir, by if you can prevail ! You say you can work mire 'so; The maye it is absured: Convince her and convert her, And I will you reward."

The pricet went with the gentleman And thought to win a prise-State he, "I will convert your wife, And open both her eyes." And when they came into the house The gentleman then ories,

"The priest has come to dies with us to "Ho is welcome!" she replies. No, dinner being over The priest, he then began To explain unto the lady The staful state of man;

"The kindness of our Savieur No Christian will deay, Who gave bineself a sacrifice— And for our sine did die." I will return to morrow, Propage some bread and wine, I will dispense the sucramont, untiaty your mind "["I bake the cake?" the lady said; And when this miracle you've seen, Convinced I'm sure you'll be.

The priest then came accordingly,
The elements did bless;
The lady sak'd, "Sir, is it changed?" His reverence answered, "yes. H's changed from real bread and wine

To anat that and blood, You may depend upon it to in the very God,

So having blessed the bread and wine To cat they did prepare; The lady said unto the priest, Jill have you now take oare? For half an ounce of araunic

I have mixed in the cake, But as you have the rature changed, "It can so difference make. The priest then stood confounded.

The bread up: we no felt from his hand and he dir will be breath; "Helps me my here?" his reverence said-"This is a cursed place." He gone ! Ho gone ! the dame replied,

And he lanked as pale as death,

Hur husband look'd estonished, And not one word did my; As longth he spoke, said he, "My dear, the prices has run away. Anch mamurery and such ponsense No christian can endure, 191 go with you and will espends

The writer says: "We are not ignorant of the gentleman's career, we know all about it, we acted with him for many years." A person whose ambition led him to aspire to the honor of being the representative of this Riding in the Ontario Legislature should know that to discussion this sentiment abuse, and to divules the secrets of, the political party with whom he had acted so many years, is a proceeding not likely to inspire his newly found conservative friends with any great amount of confidence in either his sugacity or his honor, ingly of many of those same conserva-

The political patronage in Mr. Wood's sontrol, both as a member of the Legise lature when he became Provincial Secretary and also when Provincial Treasurer, we, as conservatives, have nothing to do with at present, except to assure the writer that if Mr. Wood had bestowed the patronage as he had desired to do ting and it makes a handsome addition and would have done but for the intriguand the reform party in South Victoria might to-day have been a much more Mn. Epiron. - You are aware that churches pay no taxes, though we all feel and believe that they ought to be taxed the same as other properly. Yet we still find inconsiderate so-colled 'lady church members (who are generally the delinquents in such cases), getting up church fairs and church auctions or lotteries, and selling goods not fairly sessessed and taxed, in opposition to persons in business in this and other towns, who are compelled to pay taxes on their stock as well as rent and taxes on their places of business. It money is required either for the poor, or for churches, such can be obtained by means of sourcerts, recitations and addresses, and so one in business will suffer in consequence. Years sgo, our Town Council should have instated that an ample sum should be paid for a license to hold a shurch fair. It would be almost unclean to expect the present council to aid in this matter.
